Pact Reached To Negotiate G.M. Strike On Monday

Workers Agree to Quit Plants Before Peace Parley Starts.

Officials, Union Heads Hold Long Conference With Governor.

By the Associated Press.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 14.—General Motors Corporation and the United Automobile Workers of America, the Associated Press learned from an authoritative source tonight, have agreed to open negotiations Monday for a settlement of the widespread automotive strike.

The agreement was reached after an all-day conference with Gov. Frank Murphy, who invited representatives of the two sides to meet with him to discuss "an immediate and peaceful termination" of the labor dispute which has resulted in bloodshed and caused widespread unemployment.

The union leaders, it was learned, agreed to have the "sit down" strikers leave General Motors plants at 9 a. m. Monday after they were assured no attempt would be made to reopen the plants or to move dies and machinery.

The negotiations are scheduled to start two hours after the plants are evacuated.

With a few minor points to iron out, the conferees resumed their conference in the Governor's office late tonight after a recess. They indicated they might continue in session several hours.

Intervention Discussed.

As the conferees met, hundreds of Michigan National Guardsmen converged on Flint to bring to 2,300 the strength of troop forces guarding against recurrence of rioting and gunfire that injured 27 persons in that strike-torn automobile center Monday night.

Secretary Perkins today disclosed Presidential intervention in the strike has been discussed many times.

More than 114,000 of General Motors' automotive workers were idle tonight because of the strikes and resulting parts shortages. Material shortages forced four additional plants to announce closing plans today.

At North Tarrytown, N. Y., management of the Fisher Body and Chevrolet plants announced the two factories employing 4,000 men will be shut down completely by Monday, with 800 workers released tonight. Alfred G. Gulliver, manager of two Chevrolet parts plants at Saginaw, Mich., employing 1,700, announced they will close Saturday because of lack of materials.

Dewey Present.

The conference brought together William S. Knudsen, executive vice president of General Motors; Donaldson Brown, head of its finance committee, and John Thomas Smith, chief corporation counsel, with Homer Martin, U. S. W. A. president; Wyndham Mortimer, first vice president of the Union, and John Brophy, director of the Committee for Industrial Organization.

The Labor Department's conciliators present were James F. Dewey, J. E. O'Conner and Edward C. McDonald.

Previous attempts to bring the opposing sides together were blocked by the occupancy of General Motors plants by "sit-down" strikers. The corporation refused to negotiate until the men were evacuated; the union demanded written guarantees that General Motors would not remove equip-

Attempt to Rescue Snowbound Party Slowed by Drifts

Las Vegas, Nev., Jan. 14 (AP).—Fighting mountainous drifts, rescuers inched their way through blinding snow tonight in an effort to save three ill and storm-bound occupants of a lonely mining camp cabin.

The party breaking way with a heavy tractor and truck, was guided by airplane searchers who two days ago read this terse message scrawled in the snow on the cabin's roof:

President 'May Find the Time' To Attend Own Inauguration

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

The President regrets that because of the rush of official business he is unable to accept the courteous invitation to be present at the ceremonies attending the Inauguration of the President of the United States January twentieth Nineteen hundred thirty seven

I have rearranged my engagements & work & think I may be able to go Will know definitely Jan. 19 — F.D.R.

The President, in jesting mood, yesterday had the White House penman draft the above reply to his official invitation to the Inaugural ceremonies, sent to him by Admiral Cary T. Grayson. Later he recanted and in his own hand added the note in which he opines that he "thinks" he may be able to go.

Executive Jests When Invitation Arrives; Four 'Met' Stars to Sing at Concert; Honor Guard Is Selected.

An All-American quartet of famous artists of the Metropolitan Opera will appear with the National Symphony Orchestra at the official Inauguration concert in Constitution Hall next Wednesday evening.

These noted stars will be Susanne Fischer, soprano; Kathryn Meisle, contralto; Richard Crooks, tenor, and Richard Bonelli, barytone.

President Roosevelt, in a spirit of jest, yesterday sent the Inaugural Committee a rejection of the formal invitation it sent him to attend his inauguration.

The President had the White House penman write in the ne script used on White House invitation this formal note:

"The President regrets that because of the rush of official business he is unable to accept the courteous invitation to be present at the ceremonies attending the inauguration of the President of the United States January twentieth, nineteen hundred thirty seven."

In his own handwriting the President penciled:

"I have rearranged my engagements and I think I may be able to go. Will know definitely January 19.—F. D. R."

The Presidential honor guard, announced by Admiral Grayson, will

Curb to RFC Extension Is Sought to Stave Off Other Requests.

By Robert C. Albright.

A showdown on conflicting reorganization policies of President Roosevelt and Senator Harry Flood Byrd, of Virginia, appeared scheduled today as Senate Democratic leaders prepared to sidetrack the President's recommendations from Byrd's Senate Committee.

A spark which may set off the fight will be struck in the Senate when the economy-minded Virginian tries to block two-year extension of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and four other "temporary" agencies.

One Year Favored.

The conflict coincided with a partial report to the Byrd Committee by Brookings Institution, recommending consolidation of money-lending functions and agencies, including the RFC, at a saving of $30,161,000.

Byrd promptly objected to the Administration's proposed two-year RFC extension. He asked that Jesse Jones' vast lending organization be continued for only one year, so that reorganization of Government lending operations might be effected in 1938. He fears a two-

Smithsonian Thanks Mellon For Art Offer

Regents Pay Tribute to Generosity of Former Treasury Head.

Holding their annual meeting, with Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes presiding, the regents adopted a resolution directing Dr. Charles G. Abbot, Smithsonian Institution secretary, to convey to the former Secretary of the Treasury "the deep sense of this board of the generosity and patriotic character of this munificent cultural gift for the Nation."

Under Mellon's plan, the national art gallery he is prepared to give the country would be constructed and managed under supervision of the Smithsonian's Board of Regents.

President Roosevelt has said he will transmit the proposal to Congress for the necessary approval.

The resolution adopted yesterday states:

"Resolved, subject to action by Congress, appropriating site and authorizing appropriations, that the Board of Regents are prepared to accept in principle the proposal of the Hon. Andrew W. Mellon to do-

Broadening of Civil Service Is Discussed in Radio Forum

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 14.—In a many-sided discussion of the merit system in Government employment, four speakers representing widely separated fields of action analyzed here tonight the question, "Should all Federal employes be under Civil Service?" And reached conclusions ranging from the merely divergent to the flatly contradictory.

Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, Mrs. Eugene Meyer, of Washington, D. C.; Attorney Thurman W. Stoner, of Buffalo, N. Y., and President Luther C. Steward, of the National Federation of Federal Employes, chose the radio rostrum of America's Town Meeting of the Air to voice their views.

At Rochester, N. Y., it was arranged to turn the microphone in on a listening group for the comment of Harold Sanford, associate editor of the Rochester Democrat and Chronicle; Mrs. Stafford L. Warren, chairman of the Rochester branch of the New York League of Women Voters, and others.

Secretary Ickes, pointing out that President Roosevelt's recent message to Congress had proposed, along with departmental reorganization, a "comprehensive and widely extended merit system," expressed himself substantially in agreement with the proposition under discussion, with the customary reservations as

Federal Pay Increase Bill Given Senate

Benefits Workers Up to $3,600; to Repeal Rating System.

All Government employes receiving less than $3,600 a year will get automatic pay raises averaging $150 a year, and a minimum wage of $1,500 will be established if a measure introduced yesterday by Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, becomes law.

The outgrowth of conferences with representatives of Government employe organizations, the bill seeks to set up a new plan of efficiency ratings and to extend the classification act to the field services and new agencies.

"This bill, if enacted," Senator McCarran said, "would promote two great objects. First, it would bring a large measure of contentment into the minds of the lowly and those engaged in the most menial class of labor.

"Secondly, it would put into the hands of all full-time adult Federal employes receiving less than $3,600 or under, an augmented purchasing power by which they, in bringing to themselves the necessities of life to a greater degree, will enhance industry and business generally."

Example for Industry.

The Senator noted that 8,000,000 are still unemployed, and the increase in the cost of living. He said it is the duty of the Government to set an example for private industry in raising earnings to "American standards of living."

He added that, in drafting the bill, he was "not unmindful of the demand for increased pay in the brackets above $3,600, but the demand and necessity, as well as the humanity, involved in an increase of salaries in the lower brackets is so imperative that I deem it best that the work should start there."

Provisions are contained in the bill to extend the classification act of 1923, as amended, to include field services, with specified exceptions. The measure exempts positions already excluded from the classification act, such as apprentices, helpers, or journeymen in recognized trades and crafts and foreign officers already classified by the Rogers act.

The classification agency is empowered to set up new services and grades, if necessary, where positions in the field do not correspond with classifications in the District. It is also authorized to exclude certain jobs, such as work jointly financed by the United States and another governmental unit, local or State; positions held by inmates of institutions; jobs outside the continental limits of the United States and certain part-time occupations.

Would Repeal "Ratings."

"Section 8 provides for the repeal of the present unfair system in efficiency ratings," Senator McCarran's statement said.

"The classification agency, in consultation with heads of departments, is authorized to ascertain to what extent it is found practicable to determine efficiency ratings and it may, subject to approval of the President, require such ratings and state how they shall be used in making promotions. It further provides that all efficiency ratings shall be open to inspection by the employes.

"Section 9 provides for periodical increases within the salary ranges for the various grades by advancing once each year until the maximum rate for the grade is reached.

"Section 11 provides that employes shall maintain their same relative standing in respect to the top rate in the grade.

"Section 12 provides that employes of newly created agencies in which rates of pay were fixed without regard to the classification act shall be brought within the provisions."

Forbes Morgan Reported Slated As Liquor 'Czar'

W. Forbes Morgan, treasurer of the Democratic National Committee, is about to become "czar" of the American liquor industry, it was learned here last night.

Morgan, these reports said, would become head of the Distilled Spirits Institute, Inc., at a salary of between $50,000 and $100,000 a year. His job would parallel that of Will Hays in the movie industry and Kenesaw Mountain Landis in the baseball world.

The post which Morgan is taking over, earlier had been reported as having been offered to Postmaster General James A. Farley.

As treasurer of the Democratic National Committee, Morgan's salary has been $15,000 a year. He has been one of the most successful treasurers of his party.

Dr. James F. Doran, former prohibition administrator, is executive director of the institute. He said this morning that he knew nothing about the appointment of Mr. Morgan, although he admitted it had been discussed.

Murder Knife, Kidnaping Lair BelievedFound

By the Associated Press.

Tacoma, Wash., Jan. 14.—Belief that police had found the lair of Charles Mattson's kidnaper-killer spread tonight when State officers were reported to have picked up apparently blood-stained clothing in a shack 5 miles from where the victim's frozen body was dumped.

Informants said the find consisted of a quantity of boy's clothing with stains resembling blood and a sack of man's apparel, also stained.

State officers also found a heavy knife several blocks from the spot where they picked up a blood-stained automobile in Everett. They sought to determine whether it was the weapon with which Charles was stabbed in the back before being beaten to death.

Lipstick Found.

"Suspects" were held in many Western cities but Federal investigators showed interest in few of them.

Investigators seemingly regarded the bloody car with new interest after discovering blood on one of its wheel chains, an apparently bloody handkerchief in it and a lipstick on the running board.

At the same time Federal manhunters plainly intimated they were seeking more than one person for the brutal crime.

The boy's clothing was reported of a size slightly larger than Charles required, but he was thinly clad when seized from his home the night of December 27 and was in urgent need of warmer wraps.

Underwear and several other articles were said to comprise the find at the shack, which was located by police minutely searching the neighborhood 6 miles south of Everett, where the body was found.

Trace Tire Marks.

Investigators also sought to unravel a license plate mystery involving the Everett automobile, and to learn whether its tracks corresponded with those of the kidnaper's car on his last ride with the body.

The Everett car bore 1937 license plates stolen from an Arlington (Wash.) resident. It had 1936 plates when stolen. Investigators said the theif took the new plates from an envelope in which they had been issued. They launched a search for the envelopes as well as for the old plates.

The Seattle Times quoted an unidentified friend of the victim's family as saying Dr. Mattson saw two men believed to be the kidnapers in an automobile on Beacon Hill, Seattle, during a night "contact" attempt shortly after the abduction.

The paper said the two men approached the physician twice as he sat in an automobile following instructions, but that an oil truck passing nearby slid off the thoroughfare and attracted such attention that the pair were frightened away.

Nazi Neopaganists, Catholics Unite Against Nordic Bible

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Jan. 14.—Extreme Nazis and Catholic Church leaders, usually at opposite religious poles, were agreed today in hostility to an effort to give the Bible a new, anti-Semitic rendering, denying Jesus was a Jew.

The Neopaganists, professing the Germanic faith that rode into favor with the Nazi tide, saw in the translation work of Evangelical Bishop Weidemann, of Bremen, an obstacle to their efforts to get rid of the Bible entirely, especially the Old Testament.

Bishop Weidemann published a new rendition of the Gospel According to St. John, part of a Nazi project to retranslate the entire Bible. Within two weeks two editions were issued, totaling 2,000 copies, and the second edition was almost gone.

Gen. Erich von Ludendorff, Germany's World War quartermaster general, expressed the Neopaganist viewpoint:

"We call the Bible what it is—a deceptive work of man for Jews, Rome and an ambitious priesthood."

The Germanic faith movement is trying to suppress the Bible and draw Christians of all faiths from the church.

"Thousands of upright people are leaving the church; when are you going to resign? We give advice free."

Taste for Aperitifs Leads to Downfall of Young Cuban Who Robbed Washingtonians of Thousands in Money and Jewelry.

Arrested as he strolled into the cocktail lounge of the Mayflower Hotel to sip an aperitif, the notorious "full-dress bandit," who came to Washington to steal the Hope Diamond and lingered to rob many socially prominent men and women of money and jewelry worth thousands of dollars, was held here last night.

He told police that he was named George Garcia, a Cuban by birth, 25 years old, and making his home in the fashionable 1700 block of N street northwest.

Detectives had searched for Garcia for months, with only a meager description to guide them. They knew that Garcia, who always committed his robberies in a dress suit, sometimes removing his spotless gloves, used celluloid to "jimmy" the locks of fashionable apartments and hotel rooms.

Garcia, they knew, was perhaps the cleverest crook ever to operate in the Capital. As they searched for him, the robberies accredited to the "full-dress bandit" grew.

They found out more about him, too, as the time passed. He took airplane trips to New York whenever he had completed a "big job" here, and disposed of the gems he had stolen through a "fence." At such times he might have been a well-dressed young business executive out to clinch a contract.

He was fond of perfume, and often used rubber gloves instead of the kid ones to remove all traces of fingerprints on the doors he opened in the night.

As he roamed the northwest section, specializing on wealthy men and women in apartment hotels, he usually called up his prospective victims' residences before paying them a visit in their absence.

In many ways, police learned, his movements were like those of an elegantly dressed phantom.

Garcia used his celluloid strip on the lock of the apartment of Mrs. Helen Dodge, of 2131 Florida avenue, and stole her collection of perfume, which she had collected from all parts of the world.

Value of the collection was $400. At the time of his arrest the value of the loot he had stolen was estimated between $25,000 and $30,000.

"Boys, I really wanted to get the Hope Diamond Mrs. Evelyn Walsh McLean has," said Garcia last night.

Garcia operated in Havana and Miami before he came to Washington. He was held without bond last night.

"They couldn't do it in New York or Havana or Miami," said he.

Tri-Power Pact Against Reds Seen in Parley

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Jan. 14.—The inclusion of Britain and possibly France in a common Italo-German front against Communism is the primary object of the talks here between Premier Mussolini and Col. Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, Germany's air minister, an informed source said tonight.

This informant said Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian foreign minister, had prepared the ground for such a project in half a dozen conferences last week with Sir Eric Drummond, British Ambassador.

The initial objective of the tri-power pact, it was stated, would be a common line of action in the Spanish civil war. The ultimate objective would be to oppose any Communist disturbance of the status quo anywhere in Europe.

Diplomatic authorities said France would not necessarily be excluded from the alignment, but would be admitted only on the terms of the other three. This would mean primarily she would be compelled to abandon her alliance with Soviet Russia.

4-Power Pact Sought.

Ultimately, these same sources said, Premier Mussolini would like to see a revival of the four-power pact—Italy, France, Britain, Germany—which he fathered in 1933, but which failed to mature.

Gen. Goering and Premier Mussolini in long conferences were understood tonight to have agreed on the assistance Italy and Germany would give to Spain's Fascists if the insurgents win the civil war.

It was understood Mussolini and Goering talked of what replies their nations would make to the latest British note requesting them to ban the departure of volunteer fighters for Spain. Italy's reply, an official said, might be made while Goering is in Rome.

Blum Moves to Check Volunteers.

Paris, Jan. 14 (AP).—Premier Leon Blum presented to the Chamber of Deputies today a bill to give the government power to stop enlistment of French volunteers for the Spanish civil war.

The Government also agreed to meet Germany halfway in the matter of an economic agreement. Informed persons said the Blum cabinet had agreed to open economic negotiations with Germany without demanding German political pledges as a preliminary condition.

Sources close to the Government reported France had moved to bring Germany into the Anglo-French-

U. S. Agents Grill Acosta In Enlistment By Loyalists

Hemingway Signs To Aid Defenders

Dos Passos Also Ready to Wield Pen or Sword in War.

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 14.—The Government, seeking complete American neutrality in the Spanish civil war, today brought its great powers of moral and legal suasion into play, while undeterred American sympathizers with Madrid went on mustering men to fight the battles of loyalist Spain.

Leading the American volunteers who during a busy day of enlistment for loyalist sympathizers said they soon would be off for the civil war to give whatever help they could to the Madrid government forces were the American authors Ernest Hemingway and John dos Passos. While trading the pen for the sword, the writers said they were anxious to assist the loyalists with propaganda releases.

These developments occurred in a struggle made dramatic by its implications and by the very quiet in which it was being waged:

Acosta Questioned.

1. Bert Acosta, one of the most picturesque of American pilots, and a fellow flier, Gordon Berry, returning voluntarily from brief service as Spanish government war pilots, were met by Federal agents at Quarantine and rushed off to the Federal Building to tell their story.

The agents said Uncle Sam wanted to know who hired the aviators, and all the other circumstances. Under law, maximum penalities of three years' imprisonment and $1,000 fines may be levied for enlistment in the United States for armed service in a foreign state.

2. While Acosta and Berry were before the grand jury, Jack Altman, a New York official of the Socialist Party, said the equipping of volunteers to aid loyalist Spain in the "Eugene Debs column" would continue. Volunteers were coming into the column in such satisfactory numbers, he said, that a "quota" of 500 set for New York was expected to be met.

40 Already Across.

Already, he added, 40 men, including technicians and military experts, had gone across.

Altman contended no man joining the Debs column was violating the law. "They volunteer—they aren't asked to," he said. "Besides, they take no oath of allegiance to Madrid." He explained the Socialists were supporting the project, but it officially was being equipped by an organization known as the "friends of the Debs column."

To Sail Tomorrow.

3. In Washington a score-odd members of the House organized for an attempt to pass the most rigid of new neutrality legislation.

Even as Altman was making clear that no halt in the Debs column project was contemplated, the Medical Bureau of the "American Friends of Spanish Democracy" here was making plans for a farewell meeting tonight for 16 members of a surgical and ambulance unit organized to support the Spanish loyalists. This mission, called the organization's "first," sails Saturday.

The State Department, publishing a warning of the invocation of criminal statutes against enlistments in this country, had appealed to patriotism through a statement by Acting Secretary R. Walton Moore. To enlist on either Spanish side, he said, was "unpatriotically inconsistent with the American Government's policy of the most scrupulous nonintervention in Spanish internal affairs."

Bow to Roosevelt.

Before appearing at the Federal Building, Acosta had said he and Berry were "motivated in leaving Spain by the fact that President Roosevelt was working out his own ideas on neutrality laws. We didn't want to get into any foreign entanglements. We were going to get out, whether we got paid by the Spanish government or not." The fliers claim Madrid still owes them $6,500 apiece for their services.

Late in the day, after three hours of questioning by L. G. Turrou, special agent of the Justice Department, the fliers were released with

Hull Resumes Duties; France May Talk Debt

By Sidney Olson.

In the midst of widely differing opinions on the value of the Inter-American Peace Conference in Buenos Aires, Secretary of State Cordell Hull returned to his desk in the State Department yesterday after an absence of two months.

With the conference assailed in some newspapers as "a magnificent flop," while others praised the general results, Secretary Hull settled immediately into the harness, facing first the task of getting reacquainted with the changing diplomatic corps.

Announcement in Paris last night of appointment of Georges Bonnet, 48-year-old finance and war debt expert, as Ambassador to the United States ot replace Andre de La-Boulaye was reported here. It revived reports here that the French are preparing another attempt to interest the United States again in a discussion of scaled down war debts.

Will Not Be Negotiator.

Dispatches stated Bonnet, in taking the post, emphasized he will not act as a negotiator in the matter. The French government was understood to be considering appointment of a special debt missionary to this country. Informed quarters here, however, looked askance at the news, and prepared to listen to Bonnet on the war debt situation.

Meanwhile Secretary Hull likely will devote some time to becoming better acquainted with Fulvio Suvich, Italian Ambassador here, with a possible reciprocal trade agreement with that country in mind. Suvich arrived here early in November, just before Hull sailed for South America, and the two are expected to get together soon.

Ambassador Hans Luther of Germany, now on his way here from a visit of several months in the homeland, is another major country diplomat missing from the Washington scene during the winter. Whether he returns with any definite proposals from Germany is unguessable at this time, informed quarters said last night.

Havana Is Silent.

No further word came yesterday from Havana on the removal of Dr. Guillermo Patterson, Cuban Ambassador to the United States. The news came as a complete shock to the Washington embassy set.

Bonnet, former French minister of commerce and the French negotiator in the Franco-American reciprocal trade agreement, is a prominent member of the Radical Socialist Party there, and of the Leftist Popular Front.

Suave, widely read and widely traveled, the small-mustached Bonnet is expected to be a distinct addition to the diplomatic corps. He is not generally known here, however.

De Laboulaye, 60-year-old retiring ambassador, carefully groomed and a veteran diplomat, was well acquainted in this country for many years. He succeeded Paul Claudel, the writer, in early 1933, after 32 years in the French diplomatic service in Rumania, Germany, Russia, at the Vatican and in the Quai d'Orsay in Paris as first assistant director of American affairs.

Friend of Roosevelt.

He was first attached to the French Embassy here in the Wilson Administration, and was a friend of President Roosevelt when the latter was Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

Meanwhile, Moscow waited with somewhat more than bated breath for the onslaught of Joseph E. Davis, new American Ambassador to the Soviet; Mrs. Margery Post ("Post Toasties") Hutton Davies, and their 2,000 quarts of frozen cream.

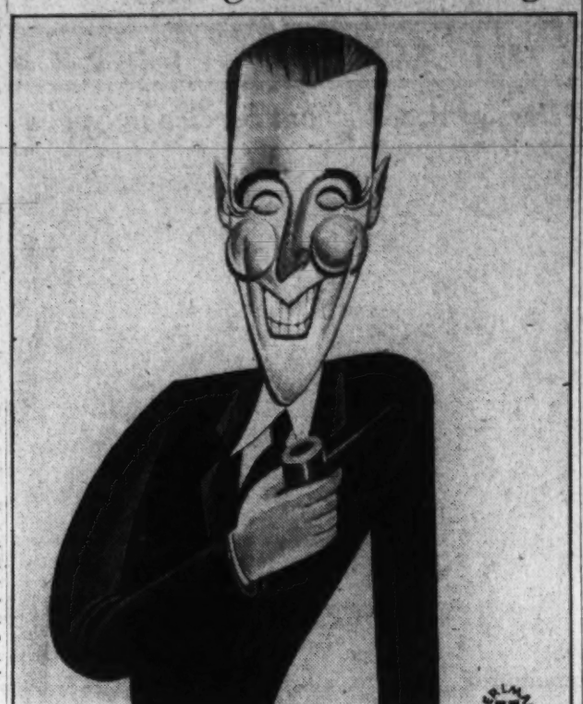

An Associated Press dispatch said redecoration of the Spasso House, famous palace of the sugar king, Tcherkov (who was shot on its steps by Bolsheviks as he was moving in), was complete. Decorators and servants sent ahead by the Davieses to install their own furniture, antiques and rare decorations, and supervise the wine cellar and larder, reported last night their work is finished. The Government furniture used by William C. Bullitt, now Ambassador to Paris, has been stored, it was reported.

To Get Special Food.

The first air-washing and air-conditioning units in the Soviet have been installed for the comfort of the Davieses. It is understood that after their arrival a special courier will meet liners from America at Hamburg, Germany, each month to receive special shipments of food and luxuries from this country for the embassy.

While surface indications at the State Department were unanimously expressive of pleasure at the Secretary's return and in praise of his efforts, it was indicated in some quarters, the department is disturbed by the criticisms of the peace conference's "meager results." It was pointed out few concrete American proposals for effective peace machinery had been adopted by the conference, while a number of wordy resolutions expressing high regards among nations in this hemisphere were issued.

Political Heir of Zioncheck Sees Congress as 'Challenge'

WARREN G. MAGNUSON.

Youthful Warren G. Magnuson, Once Bottle-Fed Orphan Baby, Eschews Bright Lights for Fascination of Co-operatives.

By Liam Lenihan.

Political heir to the overlordship of the late Marion Zioncheck's bailiwick, Warren G. Magnuson, Congressman from the First District of the State of Washington, has the distinction of being the only sitting representative who was bottle-fed in an orphan asylum. Not only that, but he has no knowledge of his antecedents, and "Magnuson" is only his adopted parents' name.

The aura of mystery about his birth does not weigh heavily, however, on the shoulders of the young man, who pitted his popularity in the primaries against a field of 17 and galloped home lengths ahead at the finish.

Has Tyro's Eagerness.

Quiet-spoken, good-looking, reserved, the blond spokesman from the Puget Sound Navy Yard confessed he has all the enthusiasm of a political tyro.

"Congress is a challenge to a young man," he said yesterday. "It is a challenge that should intrigue anyone with the many complex problems we have, although I realize fully that I will be merely a cog in a huge machine."

Born in Moorehead, Minn., April 12, 1905, Magnuson hit the open trail to the West at 17, worked his way through harvesting farms until he came to the Pacific and settled down as an ice-wagoner in Seattle.

Has Two Degrees.

But the young peddler of ice blocks had faith in education, and entered the University of Washington. Not satisfied with a bachelor's sheepskin, he enrolled in law school and was graduated in 1929.

The road of routine law practice lay ahead, but Magnuson had other ideas. He became active in the organization of a Young Men's Democratic Club, and his eyes were focused on the Legislature.

Serving as special prosecuting attorney of King County in 1932 was the initial step. Popularity and political backing did the rest. At 27 he found himself in the State Legislature, where, due to a shaking-up process, he was appointed chairman of the judiciary.

Dislikes Social Functions.

Magnuson served in the regular session of 1933 and in the special session that same winter; was appointed assistant United States district attorney shortly after adjournment, and was elected prosecuting attorney of King County in November of 1934. He resigned from that office to take his present seat in Congress.

The Representative from Seattle is a bachelor, but "has enough work here" to keep his mind off marriage. He has no intention of being a "social lion," eschews night life and parties and will attend society functions only "when it's necessary."

He describes himself as a liberal, is "a political nut" on co-operatives, but added that he has a streak of conservatism. He holds that Congress must do more for the welfare of the masses, but at the same time insists that labor must "live up to its responsibilities."

He had one parting shot at kidnapers: "The Lindbergh law gives the jury discretionary powers. Under the Seattle law, introduced by me four years ago, the death penalty is mandatory."

Flogging Case Brings Charge Against Utility

Alabama Trooper Testifies T. C. & I. Influenced Jury to Free Defendant.

By the Associated Press.

J. W. McClung, an investigator for the Alabama State police, told Senate investigators yesterday grand juries failed to indict persons accused of flogging Joseph S. Gelders, former university instructor, because the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Co. "owns about fifteen-sixteenths of the country around there."

Testifying before the Senate Civil Liberties Committee, the chunky little detective said the evidence presented had been "sufficient."

But the prosecuting officers "kept throwing cold water on it and so we had no indictment," he contended.

McClung testified that Capt. Walter J. Hanna, one of the men accused by Gelders of the flogging, was "supposed to be employed" by the Tennessee company.

"Secret Investigator."

"The best information we can get," he continued, "is that he's employed by them as a secret investigator working on Communists and labor and that sort of stuff."

Gelders told the committee he was Southern representative for the national committee for the defense of political prisoners. He said he had been working on the celebrated Scottsboro case and seeking the release of Jack Barton, a Communist organizer. Barton was jailed on charges of possessing literature advocating the overthrow of the Government by violence, but later released when the law under which he was accused was declared unconstitutional.

Gelders related in minute detail that he was abducted in September, 1935, in Birmingham, Ala., driven 60 miles into the country and beaten into insensibility with a strap, a blackjack and a belt.

Three Identified.

He said he had identified positively Hanna and Dent Williams as having participated and was quite certain a third participant was James Leslie.

"Have you any opinion why no indictment was handed down?" asked Chairman La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin.

"Yes, I believe that Assistant Prosecutor Long brought in through his questions a matter that was prejudicial to the jury—specifically I believe that he was wrong in bringing before the grand jury questions about my religion, which is Jewish, and the religion of Samuel Leibowitz, counsel in the Scottsboro case, which is Jewish."

Asked the same question, McClung replied:

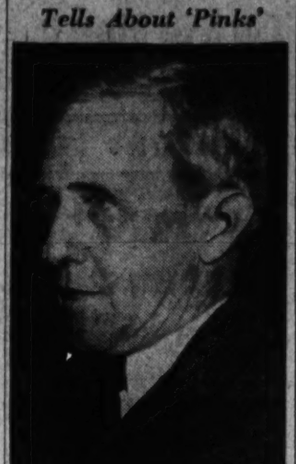

"Well, you've heard the opinion of Mr. Gelders, but I think there was something else. * * * Any decision against Capt. Hanna, even by a court of misdemeanor with a fine of $5 or $10, might bring about a civil suit which would antagonize the T. C. and I."

La Follette announced the committee had telegraphed Williams and Hanna it was going into the Gelders case and that they would be given an opportunity to make a statement. No reply was received from Hanna. Williams replied he had no knowledge of the case and so could be of no help to the committee.

Earlier in the day officilas of the T. C. and I. appeared with records subpenaed by the committee.

In response to questions they denied the company had a "secret service" or employed private detectives to check up on the union activities of their employes. They said that in one instance strikebreakers had been bought in, that special deputy sheriffs were employed as a matter of regular practice in labor disturbances, and that in some instances units of the National Guard had been dispatched.

Tells About 'Pinks'

ERNEST D. LEMAY, assistant to the president of the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Co., yesterday related to Senator La Follette, at Civil Liberties Committee hearing, how the Pinkerton detective agency had frequently called upon the company offering their services, but were not employed.

Rankin Moves To 'Try' Jurist In TVA Ruling

By the Associated Press.

Representative Rankin (Democrat), Mississippi, champion of Tennessee Valley Authority, demanded yesterday that the House investigate a jurist who aimed an injunction at that giant agency.

Rankin accused Federal Judge John Gore, of the Middle Tennessee District, of granting the injunction to "paralyze" TVA.

The legislator introduced a resolution "looking to the impeachment" of Gore but its immediate consideration was blocked by Representative Michener (Republican), Michigan, and the matter referred to the House Judiciary Committee.

"Of course, I have the right to go on the floor of the House and prefer impeachment charges against Judge Gore for his violating the law in the TVA case," Rankin said, "but I prefer to give the Judiciary Committee an opportunity to investigate the other allegations of misconduct before doing so."

Rankin said on the floor the judge "willfully violated the law" and "abused his judicial prerogatives" in issuing an injunction to prevent extension of TVA transmission lines.

Rankin termed Gore one of "certain judges" who were bringing the Nation's judiciary "into disrepute" and declared decisions such as Gore's would "do more to promote communism and discontent than all the soap-box orators in the country."

Rankin's resolution would authorize the House Judiciary Committee to "inquire into the official conduct" of Gore to determine whether "he has been guilty of any high crime or misdemeanor."

Representative Michener warned the House the resolution would "cast a cloud" over a Federal judge.

Conant Urges 'Stiff Courses' For Colleges

The colleges that turn out students with "real intellectual vigor" are the ones that provide many stiff courses in difficult subjects, according to President James B. Conant, of Harvard University. He defended the age-old competitive examination system.

Addressing the annual dinner of the Association of American Colleges at the Hotel Mayflower last night, Dr. Conant supported rigid academic discipline and assailed the smatter system of education—toying with many subjects and placing proper emphasis on none.

The speech of the Harvard president was a feature of the first day of the association's two-day annual meeting, its twenty-third. Among the speakers was Miss Meta Glass, the only woman on the program, who is president of Sweet Briar College, Virginia, president of the American Association of University Women and sister of Senator Carter Glass.

Referring to competitive examinations, Dr. Conant cited statistics of Harvard's College and law school. Of 803 graduates of the former, it was found that 50 to 90 per cent of the men who did not have a C average in their four years' work failed in their first-year law school examinations.

Eight Distinctive Needs.

Miss Glass sketched eight distinctive needs of undergraduate education. These are, she said, a "vivifying and stretching of the mind," a summary knowledge of the world, a summary view of learning and the relations of its specific fields, knowledge of the past, for its accomplishments and nonaccomplishments; a working philosophy, or attitude, toward the relations between the human and the divine, the transient and the permanent; knowledge of what makes a process and art; specialization in one or more fields to reveal the depth of scholarship, and a healthy curiosity trained to maintain a suspended judgment.

The contributions of biology, social sciences, physical sciences and philosophy to a liberal education for undergraduates were discussed, respectively, by A. J. Carlson, department of physiology, University of Chicago; Harold G. Moulton, president, Brookings Institution; Harry N. Holmes, department of chemistry, Oberlin College, and William E. Hocking, department of philosophy, Harvard University.

Prof. Hocking who, through a typographical error, was incorrectly identified in yesterday's Washington Post as a member of the Howard University faculty, was critical of colleges' handling of the subject of philosophy.

Educational practices of the colleges of Oxford and Cambridge were described by Albert Mansbridge, president of the World Association for Adult Education and a former member of the Royal Commission on the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge.

The presidential address by James R. McCain, head of Agnes Scott College, was a eulogy of Dr. Robert L. Kelly, whose retirement from the post of executive secretary of the association after 17 years service was announced yesterday morning. Members presented him with a gold watch at the dinner last night.

In his final report, Dr. Kelly informed the more than 400 delegates permanent funds of the nation's colleges and universities now amount to more than $1,600,000,000. This represents a 1,000 per cent increase since 1900.

"It is not strange," said Dr. Kelly, "that tax collectors, Federal and State, are looking upon these aggregations of wealth with envious eyes. The State has the power to destroy our institutions of learning, either privately or publicly controlled."

Acosta Grilled On War Role With Loyalists

the understanding they might be recalled.

Comment Refused.

"We don't want to tip off any person against whom we might proceed. There will be no news of importance until there is an official document, like a grand jury indictment, on record."

Upon advice of their counsel, Col. Lewis Landes, neither Berry nor Acosta—who had said he was "damned glad to get out of Spain"—would discuss what he had told Government men.

Berry, however, spoke up to insist he and Acosta had violated no law.

"There's nothing in the law that mentions aviators," he said, and Landes pounced upon him:

"You don't know a thing about the law. Just forget what the law says or does not say and leave that to the governmental authorities to interpret!"

Landes announced the fliers would go to Washington Monday or Tuesday for questioning by Maj. Gen. Oscar Westover, chief of the United States air forces, at the general's request.

Chicago Father Tries Suicide After Boys' Extortion Prank

Copyright by the Associated Press.

A "prank" extortion note written by Marion Ruminski, right, 12 years old, and delivered by his brother Stephen, 14 years old, threatening to kidnap the daughter of a neighborhood physician at Chicago, was the cause of the father of the boys, Bronislaw Ruminski, taking poison. The elder Ruminski believed himself disgraced when his schoolboy sons were questioned by police.

Shame at Arrest of Two Children Caused Poison Dose; Mattson Case Inspired NoteThreatening Physician's Daughter.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 14.—Police Sergt. Joseph Murrin said that Bronislaw Ruminski, 43, believing himself disgraced by the arrest of two schoolboy sons in a "prank" extortion case, swallowed poison at his home today.

Physicians said Ruminski would recover.

The boys, Stephen, 14, and Marion, 12, were held in the juvenile home. They confessed yesterday, police said, that they left a $30,000 extortion note, patterned after communications in the Mattson kidnaping case, at the home of a neighbor, Dr. Meyer S. Pedott.

The note threatened Dr. Pedott's daughter, Shirley, 10, and was signed: "From Ann to Mable." "Ann" and "Mable" were names used in communications between the kidnaper of little Charles Mattson, jr., and the Mattson family in Tacoma, Wash.

Marion's captors said he admitted writing the note and related that his brother placed it in Dr. Pedott's mail box.

"I did it to get even with Shirley," Marion told the police. "Her mother is always telling us she'll call the police. When I beat Shirley at marbles she told her ma and I had to give them all back to her."

Triple Murder Story Withheld From Daughter

Boarman Killing Survivor Not Aware Funeral Is to Be Today.

Recovering in Sibley Hospital from wounds inflicted by her crazed father, Mary D. Boarman, 25, is unaware of the tragic fate which has left her the only surviving member of her family, it was learned last night.

Dr. Robert R. Hottel, 1222 Monroe street northeast, the family physician, said he had parried Mary's inquiries by telling her she could not have company and must remain very quiet.

He reported the girl's condition as much improved. She is suffering from several head cuts and a pistol-shot wound in the right forearm.

Funeral services will be held at 9:30 a. m. today in the home on Queens Chapel road, just across the District line, for Corbin E. Boarman, 65; Mrs. Frances Boarman, 60, and the two children, Margaret, 26, and William Francis, 21. The services will be followed by solemn requiem mass at 10 o'clock in the St. Anthony's Catholic Church, Brookland, with burial in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Sixteen members of Alpha Gamma Rho fraternity, to which the son belonged at the University of Maryland, will serve as pallbearers. He was a graduate student at the university and an assistant instructor in the department of agricultural economics.

The mother and her two children were victims of the father's maniacal fury Tuesday night. After slaying three members of his family and making an unsuccessful attempt to kill Mary, he hurled himself beneath the wheels of a B. & O. freight train near the Catholic University Station.

Radio Monopoly Inquiry Is Sought

By the United Press.

Representative William P. Connery (Democrat), Massachusetts, yesterday asked Congress to approve a broad investigation of alleged radio monopoly through a seven-man House committee armed with power to subpena witnesses and records.

His resolution was referred to the Rules Committee, whose indorsement Connery said he expected.

"During the last year I have received hundreds of complaints from all over the United States charging the existence of a monopoly in radio," Connery explained. "The main charge is that the National Broadcasting Co. and the Columbia Broadcasting System control the air.

"It's a question of the tremendous power of propaganda. They can deny any one the right to speak over the radio."

When Miss Allen came to Hollywood from the stage 5 years ago, she was separated from Gus Sonnenberg, wrestler, whom she had secretly married in Boston. She obtained a divorce from him here in 1934.

Porter Admits Bathtub Killing Of Housewife

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 14.—Major Greene, 33, colored porter, tonight awaited trial on a charge of murdering Mary Robinson Case, pretty Queens housewife, after authorities said his pleas of innocence had been battered down by a flood of bloody evidence.

District Attorney Charles P. Sullivan said the wiry little man confessed after he was confronted with an array of evidence which he thought he had destroyed.

Lays Plan for Trial.

Continuing the speed which marked official activity from the time the 25-year-old victim's body was found in the bathtub of her apartment Monday night, Sullivan immediately began laying plans for a trial.

His first step was to go before the grand jury to seek a first degree murder indictment.

The prosecutor said a 12-page confession was signed by Greene after 24 hours of questioning.

A modified version of the document quoted the prisoner as saying he entered the woman's apartment bent on burglary, struck her with a mechanic's hammer when he found her at home, throttled and struck her again when she resisted, and finally placed her body in the bathtub.

Changed His Clothes.

Then, the official version went on, he gathered up a few trinkets and a suit belonging to the husband, Frank W. Case, who was at work, and went upstairs to change his clothes in a vacant apartment.

His bloodstained trousers and the hammer were dropped down an incinerator chute in the belief they would be destroyed.

But the incinerator was not operating and when police arrived they fished out the trousers and traced them, through a tailor's mark, to Greene. They arrested him early yesterday.

Fingerprints, police said, virtually clinched the case.

Mrs. Case was buried today at Lancaster, Pa.

Ohio Auditor Balks At Inaugural Trip

Columbus, Ohio, Jan. 14 (AP).—State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson declined today to authorize payment of expense money for a legislative delegation named to attend the Inauguration of President Roosevelt.

The auditor told Speaker Frank Uible that he would refuse to approve vouchers for the money unless the speaker said "We will be advised by the Attorney General that the payment was legal. Uible called at the auditor's office with vouchers for $800.

Later the speaker said "We will make the trip."

Stuttgart newspaper, giving the address of the local office of the Germanic faith.

Bishop Weideman explained his translation work began with the Gospel according to St. John, because therein, "the struggle against the Jewish spirit which runs throughout the Bible reached its highest point."

He referred to Jesus as "the first great opponent of the Jews." His purpose, he said, was to give to Germans of today what Martin Luther gave to his contemporaries. He continued:

"The new Bible translation will neither follow Luther's nor the original text. It will give our dear Germans what Luther gave his Germans.

"Biblical conceptions will be rendered into today's German language. This consciously means rendering the text in German, rather than in Hellenistic-Jewish. The decisive question for Christianity today is its attitude toward the Jewish spirit."

Judea Called "Jewland."

Bishop Weidemann asserted Christ was not a Jew, since His homeland was Galilee, which, he said, the real Jews regarded with contempt. His version of the Gospel pictures Christ as "the very opposite of the Jews." and asserts that was why he was crucified.

Judea is rendered as "Jew Land," and the passage saying Jesus "left Judea and departed again into Galilee" is made to read that He "left Jew Land and went again into his homeland of Galilee."

One element of harmony was introduced into Germany's religious controversies today when Nazi leaders announced peace in a four-year struggle over religious education of German youth.

Balder von Schirach, Reichsleader for youth, issued an order releasing young people from state duty during Sunday church hours and permitting children to be taught according to their religious beliefs.

Nazi leaders professed confidence that would end trouble between both the Catholic and Protestant churches and the Nazi youth movement, which churchmen said was weaning youth away from religion toward the Nazi creed of "blood, race and soil."

Civil Service Is Discussed in Radio Forum

to the freedom of action to be left to executives and the right of those executives to choose chief assistants without regard to Civil Service.

Mrs. Meyer commended the principle of civil service and said the "whole democratic system" would be "imperiled" unless the "carefully thought out provisions" of President Roosevelts' committee on administrative management were adopted.

"Whatever President Roosevelt may achieve in the course of his presidency," Mrs. Meyer said, "nothing will transcend in importance this voluntary surrender to nonpartisan administration of the governmental agencies which now constitute the fulcrum of his vast powers."

She insisted, however, that the merit system extension proposed by the committee should not be made effective until after the report of the committee of eSnator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, on governmental reorgaization.

To act beforehand, she said, might serve to perpetuate many Government bureaus which she described as overlapping.

Stoner, a former professor of law, arguing that the Constitution "did not create a fixed and permanent official group to administer the the Government," asserted the party system "to the realist" must feed "on the brad of political life, and that bread is * * * patronage * * *."

Secretary Ickes, saying a "genuinely administered system of civil service" was essential to economy and efficiency, suggested a law prohibiting "taking advantage of the Government through appointments" might not be "as revolutionary as it may sound.,"

The staffing of current Government bureaus with non-Civil Service personnel he declared justified by the emergency, but, he said, "this policy should not be perpetuated nor applied to a permanent force."

He commended the National Civil Service Reform League for its work against the "spoils system." Of James A. Farley, the Roosevelt Administration's chief of patronage, he said:

"It has been the lot of Mr. James A. Farley to have had to take the responsibility for a system of patronage over the development of which he has had as little control as the average citizen.

"I am speaking of the so-called 'Farleyism' in Government employment, and the Mr. Farley whose name was misused in the late campaign to signify a political Goliath dripping with the blood of spoils. And I would like to testify at this time that in all my dealings with Mr. Farley he has never made a demand on me for the appointment of a single person."

Mrs. Meyer found fault with the administrative committee's recommendation that the chief administrator (over employment) be removable at the pleasure of the President.

"As for any idea that the President wishes to usurp the power of the Civil Service administrator, this seems to be rather illogical.

"As one senator put it to me, 'there's no use worrying about the increase of the President's powers because at present he has them all anyway. With $8,000,000,000 of patronage at the President's disposal, we have no Government. The President is the Government.'

"For this reason, if for no other," she added, "the Congress probably will be in a frame of mind to accept what has always been anathema to them—the elimination of the spoils system—for they are now renouncing patronage which they in truth no longer command."

Mrs. Meyer drew applause from the audience when she said:

"A flexible, well-implemented merit system leading to the highest governmental positions, rewarded with salaries befitting the responsibilities involved, will transform the whole character of our political and civil life.

"With the spoils system eliminated, the competition between our political parties would be based on ideas and usefulness rather than upon the adroit manipulation of political machines. The kind of politician who makes his way through the adroit use of spoils is not only useless, but an actual menace to the modern state. The type of politician the country now needs is one who can interpret our new social trends in workable legislation, one who can hold his place in public esteem through deep and farsighted understanding of the Nation's problems."

Mrs. Meyer emphasized that strong popular support of the President's recommendations must be mustered if they are to become law. "We can take nothing for granted," she said in appealing to her audience to make their feelings known to members of Congress.

"Only if the Congress is made to understand in no uncertain terms that you are in favor of the merit system as it has been outlined will it receive approval," Mrs. Meyer declared.

He expressed alarm over the development of trade unions in the Government service, and said the alliance of civil service workers with union groups in private industry "may easily lead us into new danger zones more formidable than any yet approached."

A strike in Government service, Stoner said, would be highly dangerous. "The Government cannot and should not be coerced in this manner," he declared.

Stoner deplored the tendency of union groups to inject themselves into controversies which do not directly affect them, and pointed out how embarrassing it would be for this Government if a union of its employes adopted resolutions dealing with foreign affairs.

Steward pointed out that Government employes are forbidden by law from striking, and sharply disagreed with Stoner's contention that political parties are dependent upon patronage for their existence.

He pointed out that patronage is unheard of in Great Britain and that political parties there are not hampered by its absence. "We certainly could do as well over here," he declared.

"The way out is to raise the conception of public service in the minds of the citizens," he said.

"I agree wholeheartedly with what Mrs. Meyer has said as to the importance of the President's message," Steward added. "Our organization indorses his recommendations affecting personnel without qualifications."

Jail 'Dangerous,' First Lady Says After Hour Tour

Conditions at the District Jail are a "danger" to the community, Mrs. Roosevelt said yesterday after spending an hour at the institution, including a visit to five men waiting in death cells and to prisoners sleeping on floor mattresses.

"It's too old, too small, and is dangerous because there is no segregation of first offenders or the diseased," asserted the First Lady.

Mrs. Roosevelt added that she took her hat off" to the administrative officials of the jail.

On her tour, Mrs. Roosevelt was accompanied by Police Court Judge Edward M. Curran, and was escorted through the jail by Superintendent T. M. Rives.

Double for Lee Dies at Memphis

He was a native of Washington, D. C., a second cousin of Admiral Raphael Semmes, of the Confederate navy.

note the gallery of masterpieces of painting and sculpture as set forth in his communication to the President of the United States of December 31, 1936, and that the details of arrangements relating thereto are hereby referred to the permanent committee with power.

Resolved further that the Board of Regents approves in principle the proposition to delegate to the proposed board of nine trustees the holding of title and management of the proposed national gallery of art."

Regents attending the meeting were Vice President Garner, Senators Robinson and Logan, Representatives Cannon Goldsborough and Gifford, Frederic A. Delano, R. Walton Moore, Assistant Secretary of State, and Chief Justice Hughes.

To them Secretary Abbot, reviewing achievements of the Smithsonian during the past decade, pointed out the institution has sent 267 expeditions to every corner of the earth, nearly 5,000,000 specimens have been added to the collections, 16,000,000 persons have inspected museum exhibits and 24,000,0000 have visited National Zoological Park.

Dr. Abbot called attention to the increasing need for additional space in the National Museum. Congress has authorized the expenditure of $6,500,000 to build two wings on the Natural History Building, which would approximately double the space, and plans have been drawn up. The initial appropriation, however, is yet to be made.

Nearly 500,000 specimens were added to collections of the National Museum during the past year, according to the annual report.

In research, outstanding developments were in the studies of correlation of solar radiation with the weather and of the effects of light on plant growth.

It was apparently proved that short interval changes of the heat output of the sun, such as run their courses in a few days, are of major influence on the weather for the ensuing two weeks or more. Dr. Abbot said Weather Bureau scientists have agreed with him that investigation of this effect may lead to a method of forecasting some features of the weather two weeks or more in advance.

He also reported considerable progress in the development of his 23-year cycle weather hypothesis. It is Dr. Abbot's theory that droughts occur in 46-year cycles. On the basis of his findings, he said that moderate drought conditions may be expected in the Northwest between 1950 and 1960 and a very severe dry spell in the decade from 1975 to 1985.

In the field of radiation effects on organisms, Smithsonian experts arrived at a curve which shows the efficiency of different colored light rays in promoting the fundamental phenomenon of photosynthesis in plans, which is basic to all earthly life.

Rebel Positions Blasted.

Madrid (Friday), Jan. 15 (U.P.).—Loyalist artillery laid down a heavy barrage early today against enemy positions around University City.

Asturian "dynamiteros," squirming through shell holes of the university sector on their stomachs and protected by heavy mist, blew up the right wing of the Clinico Hospital.

For nearly two months a strong band of rebel legionnaires, cut off from their comrades, had held the building, although surrounded on three sides by loyalists. Nearly 300 rebels were reported killed. Rebels still held a portion of the Clinico and were said to be in desperate circumstances.

Fascists Take Estepona.

Gibraltar, Jan. 14 (AP).—Spanish headquarters in Algeciras tonight asserted in an official announcement the insurgents had captured Estepona, strongly fortified town on the Spanish coast, 45 miles from Malaga.

The announcement said there were serious losses on both Fascist and Socialist sides.

(The Socialist naval ministry in Valencia reported Socialist bombing planes had frustrated a Fascist attempt to land troops at Estepona.

(Fascist vessels, led by the cruisers Almirante Cervera and Canarias, it reported, were forced to turn about and speed under full steam for the Spanish Moroccan port of Ceuta as the Socialist planes rained bombs on the concentration. Two bombs, it added, fell on the deck of the Almirante Cervera.)

A Three Days' Cough Is Your Danger Signal

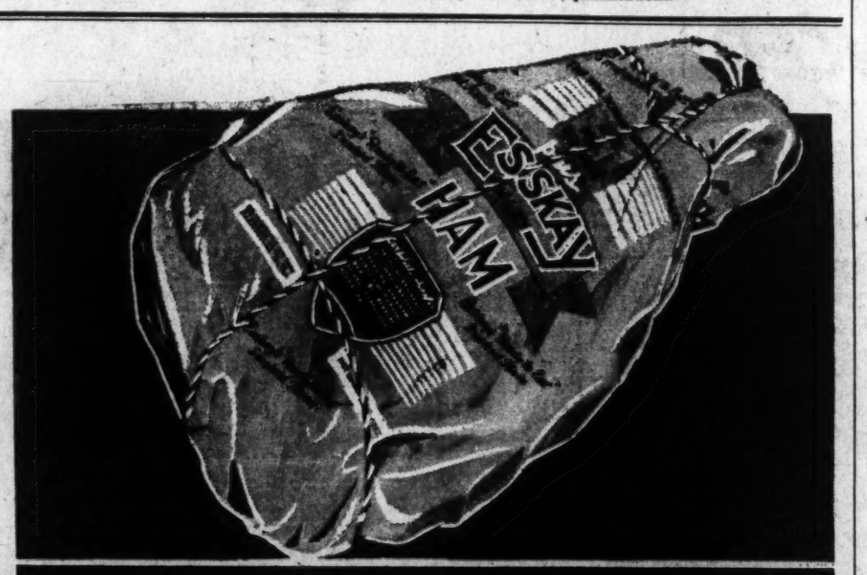

A cough, chest cold or bronchial irritation today may lead to serious trouble tomorrow. You can relieve them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified Creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery that aids nature to soothe and heal the infected membranes and to relieve the irritation and inflammation as the germ-laden phlegm is loosened and expelled.

Medical authorities have for many years recognized the wonderful effects of Beechwood Creosote for treating coughs, chest colds and bronchial irritations. A chemist worked out a special process of blending Creosote with other ingredients so that now in Creomulsion you get a real dose of Beechwood Creosote which is palatable and can even be taken frequently and continuously by adults and children. Thousands of doctors now use Creomulsion in their own families and practice, and druggists rank Creomulsion top because in this genuine, original product you can get a real dose of Creosote so emulsified that it goes to the very seat of the trouble to help loosen and expel germ-laden phlegm.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles, especially those that start with a common cold and hang on and on. Get a bottle of Creomulsion right now from your druggist, use it all up as directed and if you fail to get satisfactory relief, he is authorized to refund every cent of your money. U. S. Plans Aid If Parleys Fail In Motor Strike

By William V. Nessly.

While the Government was looking hopefully to Gov. Frank Murphy's conference at Lansing, Mich., yesterday for a possible settlement of the automobile strike, it was disclosed officials have several possible steps in mind, if and when the negotiations there fail.

Secretary of Labor Perkins, who has conferred frequently with President Roosevelt on the auto and ship strikes, said at her press conference that Presidential intervention had been discussed many times but no definite action had been decided on. She said developments at yesterday's Lansing conference would have to be awaited before a decision could be reached on which avenue of approach should be followed by the Government.

Later in the day James F. Dewey, Labor Department conciliator, reported to the Secretary from Lansing "some progress" had been made in the conference and "a very friendly spirit was shown."

Maloy Admits Being Paid.

In the steel unionization dispute being fought before the National Labor Relations Board, an examiner yesterday heard Elmer J. Maloy admit he was being paid to solicit members for the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers while he was an employe representative in the Pittsburgh District Council of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation organization.

Meanwhile, the United Mine Workers Journal, in an editorial, accused American Federation of Labor craft unions of "scabbing" in the automobile strike. John L. Lewis is president of the mine workers and also is head of the Committee for Industrial Organization, which is backing the strike. His union, along with that of the auto workers and eight others, was suspended by the federation for trying to organize industries into one big union for each, instead of in the federation's craft system.

The editorial was prompted by the Metal Trades Department of the federation advising members of its affiliated unions to return to their work in the strike-closed Fisher Body plant at Cleveland, since their unions had not authorized the tie-up.

The editorial said:

"The Central Labor Union of Cleveland indorsed and approved the strike, as did several other central bodies and organizations. Yet in spite of this fact, four craft unions of the American Federation of Labor started a scab movement to break the strike. Electricians, machinists, plumbers and bricklayers wrote letters to the General Motors Corporation requesting it to reopen its plants in spite of the strike.

"It was a clear case of scabbing by these unions against a strike by another labor union—an attempt to help General Motors to defeat the Automobile Workers Union. It would be difficult to conceive a more fragrant and despicable case of scabbing.

"The action of these scabbing unions has aroused the automobile workers and the ranks of organized labor in general to a high pitch of indignation."

Progress in Glass Strike.

Miss Perkins said "real progress toward adjustment" of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. strike was reported by her conciliators. She said it was likely that strike would be settled before the one in the Libbey-Owens-Ford plants. These tie-ups have handicapped production by General Motors because they provided the motor company with much of its glass.

Revealing that "extra-curricular" steps already have been taken by the Government in the automobile stalemate, the secretary said that while Gov. Murphy is in a fine strategic position to seek peace, he has no opportunity since his inauguration to build up his own State labor department, and for that reason the Federal department has helped him with conciliators, digests and reports.

Text of Brookings Report

Following is a summary of Brookings Institution's conclusions thus far reached on reorganization of Federal lending functions:

1. That the preferred stock of banks be transferred from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the Government buying stock in the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation to cover the investment. Payment by the Government to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation for new stock and payment by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for the preferred stock of banks, to be made with Reconstruction Finance Corporation bonds now held by the United States Treasury.

2. That the direct loans to industry, made by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation be sold to the Reserve banks if the latter are to continue making direct loans, or sold to the Treasury in the event that direct loans are presently to be discontinued.

3. That regardless of the disposition made of the outstanding direct loans, if the making of direct loans to industry is to be continued, by either the Reconstruction Finance Corporation or the Reserve banks, the industrial advisory committees be abolished.

4. That the production credit corporations purchase the stock of the regional agricultural credit corporations from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the Government purchase stock in the production credit corporations in corresponding amount, payment to be made in both cases in Reconstruction Finance Corporation bonds now held by the United States Treasury.

5. That all the assets of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, other than those provided for in the recommendations listed above, be transferred to the Treasury, and a corresponding amount of Reconstruction Finance Corporation bonds held by the Treasury be canceled.

6. That the assets of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation be taken over by the Treasury and its outstanding liabilities assumed by the Treasury. In the event that it is desired to continue the Reconstruction Finance Corporation's lending activities beyond the date now fixed for its termination, it is recommended that it make future loans as fiscal agent of the Treasury.

7. That the balance of Public Works Administration loans which has not been taken over by he Reconstruction Finance Corporation be purchased by the Treasury.

8. That the collection of assets taken over by the Treasury under these recommendations be entrusted to the Federal Reserve banks as fiscal agents.

9. That the Commodity Credit Corporation be put under the control of the Farm Credit Administration and its loans liquidated through the Cooperative Credit Division.

10. That the Federal Housing Administration and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board be amalgamated.

11. That in the new agency suggested in the preceding recommendation there be created a new corporation which shall take over the assets and assume the liabilities of both the Home Owners Loan Corporation and the Federal Housing Administration.

12. That the outstanding loans of the Home Owners Loan Corporation for which foreclosure is not imminent be placed under the protection of mortgage insurance of the type now offered by the Federal Housing Administration, commonly known as Title 11 loans, and that these loans be sold to the public.

13. That the funds obtained by this operation be used in part to retire Home Owners Loan Corporation bonds and in part to create a fund out of which losses on guaranteed loans shall be paid in cash, thereby obviating or postponing the necessity for the further issuance of Farm Credit Administration debentures.

After the riots outside the Fisher Body plant at Flint, scene of a "sit-down" strike, and subsequent mobilization of the National Guard, both sides accepted Murphy's invitation to confer "without condition or prejudice" in an attempt to find a basis for negotiation.

Before the Governor's conference started, Larry Davidon, union attorney, ordered that Prosecutor Joseph Joseph, of Genesee County (Flint), violated a Michigan statute by participating in cases affecting strikes while he owned 61 shares of General Motors stock.

Admits Stock Ownership.

Joseph, confirming the stock ownership, said it was "ridiculous to assume that could affect his judgment in "a situation as grave as that which confronts Flint," and added that "technicalities are being attempted in efforts to thwart the proper processes of law and the maintenance of order."

A General Motors injunction suit against the "sit-down" strikers at Flint recently was transferred from a circuit judge after corportaion attorneys said they learned he owned General Motors stock.

Secretary Perkins reported "real progress" was being made toward settlement of the strikes that have tied up the Nation's flat-glass industry. Shortages resulting from these strikes have been credited with responsibility for part of the automotive shutdown.

Byrd-Roosevelt Showdown Set For Hill Today

Curb to RFC Extension Is Sought to Stave Off Other Requests.

year extension will set a precedent for 15 other temporary agencies seeking new life.

The Administration's RFC measure again will be called up shortly after the Senate convenes today, and majority leaders will attempt to drive it to passage, unamended, over Byrd's opposition.

The plan to route the President's message on overhauling the Government around Byrd's committee followed House approval of resolutions to set up a special privileged committee and joint committees of House and Senate to handle the President's report.

Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson indicated he planned to cooperate with House leaders in this arrangement. Whether Byrd would be named to the special Senate committee could not be learned, but indications were both Robinson and Minority Leader Charles L. McNary would serve.

Glass' Committee.

Earlier, discussion had centered on referring the President's report to the Senate Appropriations Committee, of which Byrd is not a member. His colleague, Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, is chairman of the Appropriations Committee.

Two or three parts of the first chapter of the as yet uncompleted 15-section Brookings Institution reorganization report were discussed yesterday at an executive meeting of the Byrd committee, attended by both Robinson and McNary. It was decided to hold hearings on the recommendations the week of January 25.

Brookings' proposals for reorganizing the Federal lending set-up were:

1. Consolidate Federal Housing Administration with the Home Owners Loan Corporation, and eliminate duplicated personnel and expenses, at a saving of $24,500,000.

2. Transfer the Commodity Credit Corporation to the Farm Credit Administration.

3. On termination of RFC lending activities to transfer its assets to other existing agencies for speedy liquidation.

PWA Transfer.

4. Transfer of lending activities and assets of the Public Works Administration to the Treasury Department.

In liquidation of units, the Brookings report favored use of existing agencies wherever possible. Byrd said the Brookings estimate of $30,161,000 in savings from these first reforms could be made even greater "because the recommendations cover agencies employing more than 25,000 persons at total operating expenses aggregating more than $60,000,000 annually."

Not included in these preliminary findings was part 3 of the lending chapter, dealing with banking and credit supervisory agencies.

"Upon the President's invitation," said Byrd, "I have discussed the matter with him and was advised by him that the recommendations of the Senate Committee for abolition and consolidation might be used effectively to supplement his own investigation."

Passed by House.

Resolutions to set up special House and joint committees to handle the President's reorganization plan, which would set up two new departments, give the President power to make shifts, revamp personnel administration and extend the merit system, slipped easily through the House yesterday.

"I hope some economy will result," said Rules Committee Chairman John J. O'Connor. "The fact is that the cost of regular establishments has increased $1,000,000,000, not counting relief. I would rather see the $1,000,000,000 taken out of cost of Government, than away from those who need relief."

Byrd, who took particular exception to the President's proposal to modify the powers of the Comptroller General, complained the President's recommendations, aimed at efficiency rather than economy, did not go far enough. The President estimated his own plan would save only $30,000,000. The single lending phase of the Brookings plan is estimated to save more than that.

Would "Open Door."

Several of the agencies whose extension of life was coupled with the RFC two-year continuance coming up in the Senate today, are involved in the Brookings consolidation plan. The RFC bill, blocked by Byrd yesterday, would carry with it to two years continuance the RFC Mortgage Corporation, Commodity Credit Corporation, Electric Home and Farm Authority and the Export-Import Bank. Byrd says this would open the dyke for other similar extensions.

The Brookings Institution report offered no hard and fast rule for eliminating and consolidating lending operations, but proposed alternative methods of procedure, dependent on the policy of Congress affecting various agencies.

Nice Asks Fund Of $64,000,000 For Biennium

$2,000,000 Increase Over First Estimates on Maryland Budget.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 14.—The budget which Gov. Nice plans to submit to the Legislature for the fiscal years of 1938-1939 will call for total appropriations of about $64,000,000, an increase of approximately $2,000,000 over the current budget figures, it was learned today.

The increase of approximately $1,000,000 for each of the fiscal years of the proposed budget, is made necessary to take care of additional appropriations for care of the insane, teachers and classified service pay restorations and additional beds for colored tubercular patients.

Although the total budget figures will only be boosted by about $2,000,000, it will be necessary to divert $4,000,000 annually from special funds to general funds to bring the budget in balance.

Diversion Necessary.

This policy of diverting special funds, such as gasoline tax and motor vehicle revenues into general funds, is being carried on by the Governor. For instance, the current 1937 budget has a "paper deficit" of $3,237,000 in the general fund account. In other words the expected general fund receipts of $10,050,000 for 1937 fall $3,237,000 short of the amounts appropriated from the funds by the budget.

This "paper deficit" is now being cared for by diversion of gasoline and motor vehicle revenues, and by bond issue returns. The proposed increase of $1,000,000 annually in the total appropriations of the forthcoming budget, will necessitate the diversion of this additional sum, and the continuing of the diversions of the present budget.

It was pointed out, however, that about $4,000,000 in annual diversions for the 1938-39 fiscal years, will be offset by about $3,000,000 annually in increased revenues from special taxes. The returns of the State 5-per cent gasoline tax for the last calendar year were higher than at any time in the history of the tax. Liquor tax receipts also increased, and motor vehicle returns are reported on the upgrade.

New Taxes Likely.

The Governor is known to feel that these increases in revenue really belong to the departments and activities to which the special taxes are originally allocated. In order to restore the proposed diversions, and give these departments the benefit of the revenue increases, he is understood to be ready to recommend a series of indirect taxes for consideration of the Legislature.

This phase of the budget situation, it was pointed out, would be covered by the Governor's budget message. The Governor is known to be unalterably opposed to any increase in the State real estate tax. His budget message, therefore, will probably include suggestions for an income tax, sales tax, continuation of the special relief taxes now in effect, a cigarette tax and the legalizing of bookmaking.

It also was learned that the Governor will not include the appropriations for relief purposes in his budget.

Citizenship Case Injunction Issued

Justice F. Dickinson Letts, in District Court, yesterday ordered the Secretary of State, the Secretary of Labor and the Commissioner of Immigration to show cause by January 20 why they should not be placed under court order to issue citizenship papers to Marie Elizabeth Elg, of New York City.

In a petition filed here yesterday, Miss Elg claimed she was born here and had never committed any act of expatriation, although she and her father had remained in Sweden for two years. The father had been naturalized here in 1924 and the papers were revoked when he went abroad for an extended stay.

Miss Elg, through Attorney Henry F. Butler, claimed that even though her father might have lost his citizenship here, she had retained hers by reason of her birth here and the subsequent naturalization conferred upon her by the United States. This, she said, could not be affected by the action of her father in remaining in Sweden, even though she accompanied him.

Revision Sought In District Code

Identical bills aiming to establish a commission to revise the District's code of laws were introduced in the Senate and House yesterday at the request of the District Bar Association.

The revision has been urged by local attorneys for several years and has been advocated by Chairman King, of the Senate District Committee. The new bills were introduced by Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, and Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia.

A commission of three Washington attorneys, members of the District bar and residents of the city is proposed by the measures. Appointments would be made by the President. Salaries of $10,000 a year are authorized for the commissioners under a proposed $50,000 appropriation.

Preferred consideration would be given by the commission to the criminal statutes in revising the District code. The last District code was published in 1930 and was prepared during the Sixty-ninth and Seventieth Congresses.

Drug Found by U. S. Scientist Kills Pneumonia Germ in Mice

Large Dosage Required, However, Makes It Unsuitable for Treatment of Humans; Chemical Cheap and Available.

Discovery of a drug which kills pneumonia germs in mice was announced yesterday by Dr. Sanford M. Rosenthal, of the National Institute of Health.

The scientist warned, however, that, while mice infected with the three major types of pneumonia have been treated with success, because of the large dosage required the present chemical treatment could not yet be applied to human beings.

He was hopeful, however, he said, now that a successful treatment has been found for mice, that a more powerful drug effective on humans, would soon be found.

Importance of the discovery is emphasized by the current outbreak of common colds and influenza, which frequently are accompanied by pneumonia. During recent weeks hospitals in Eastern cities have been crowded with sick persons, and a cure for pneumonia would materially have cut down the number of fatalities.

Lengthly technical name of the effective drug is "P-Aminobenzene Sulphonamide." It is reasonably cheap, and available commercially, Dr. Rosenthal said.

It is closely allied to the drug treatment of streptococcus infection which was given Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., at Boston last month.

2 Youths Confess 18 Purse Thefts

Two colored youths confessed last night that they had snatched pocketbooks from 18 women during the past several weeks.

The youths, Nathaniel Robinson, 18, and Charles Green, 19, both of the 1800 block of Seventh street northwest, were arrested by Policeman Luther Wise.

Metal heel plates worn by the youths led to their arrest. The women who had been robbed told police the youths wore heel plates. Wise was attracted to the youths when he heard their heels striking the sidewalk with a metallic sound. They attempted to run when he called to them.

3 Former Presidents Are Honored by Club

Lewis A. Payne, Col. William H. McCarty and C. Emery Galliher, past presidents of the Cosmopolitan Club, were awarded certificates at yesterday's meeting. The certificates set forth the work of each president during his term and voiced the appreciation of the club.

The presentations were made by Fred J. Rice, who said that the awards had been neglected for the past two years and that club members thought they should be resumed. The certificates were beautifully embossed and framed.

Battleship Bids Due on March 15

Bids on one of the two new $50,000,000 battleships, announced last week by President Roosevelt, will be received by the Navy Department March 15, Secretary Swanson announced yesterday. Construction of the new ships is expected to begin June 1.

Only one of the two proposed ships will be built in a private drydock, the Secretary stated, a Government shipyard undertaking construction of the other. He added that the second ship may be similarly constructed by the Government, if bids of private builders are much higher than departmental estimates.

The Navy does not intend to ask Congress for any more battleships during the current year, according to Secretary Swanson. The two new ships, expected to be completed by 1941, will be the only battleships constructed in the last 15 years.

Pope Pius Leaves Bed; Has Visitors

Vatican City, Jan. 14 (AP).—Pope Pius left his bed today for the second successive day to receive visitors from his wheelchair, but Vatican sources expressed belief his activity was due to his strong will power rather than any real improvement.

After receiving callers, including his sister, Donna Camilla Ratti, the Pope said he hoped to make daily trips to the study and to his chapel for mass, so long as his strength holds out.

Society Woman Sued for Libel By 7 Politicians

Mrs. Ellen F. Vanderbilt Fitz Simons Defendant in R. I. Actions.

By the United Press.

Newport, R. I., Jan. 14.—Mrs. Ellen French Vanderbilt Fitz Simons, widow of Alfred Vanderbilt and wife of Paul Fitz Simons, tonight was named defendant in seven civil suits alleging libel.

The suits, seeking a total of $70,000 damages from the socially prominent and wealthy Republican national committeewoman, were filed on behalf of seven Republican Rhode Island State Senators.

Mrs. Fitz Simons is charged with allegedly circulating and publishing a letter in which she referred to the seven Senators as "yellow dogs" and "traitors to their party."

The plaintiffs claim that the letter was circulated among women members of the Republican State Central Committee.

The seven Senators, comprising part of the Republican majority in the State Senate, previously had formed a coalition with the Democratic minority, wresting temporary intra-party control of the body.

Suits of $10,000 each were filed for State Senators Cleveland Carpenter, Harry T. Bodwell, Frederick C. Broomhead, Oliver H. Stedman, Charles Watts, John Simpson, jr., and Senate President pro tem. Russell H. Handy.

Navy Supply Ship Soon Will Carry Food to Samoans

Loaded with canned foods, vegetables and meats for the relief of a colony of 200 marines and Navy men and their families, the U. S. S. Arctic, a Navy supply ship, will sail for American Samoa the end of the month.

The island, with a native population of 11,000 and a handful of Americans, has been isolated since the maritime strike began. The settlement is dependent on the Matson Line, operating between California, Hawaii and the South Seas, for mails and fresh food.

American Samoa produces only cocoanuts and pork as foodstuffs, which comprise the diet for natives. American Navy men and marines are dependent entirely on imported foods. Loaded to capacity with cold storage products, the Arctic will sail from San Francisco on January 30, arriving at Samoa on February 23.

A.& P. Co. Accused In Trade Violation

The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co., owner of more than 14,000 retail grocery stores, yesterday was charged by the Federal Trade Commission with violation of the Robinson-Patman act to forbid price discriminations to purchasers of large stocks of goods. The company was alleged to have accepted from eight concerns from which it buys merchandise allowances or discounts in lieu of brokerage, a practice forbidden by the law.

The eight concerns include the H. J. McGrath Co., the Phillips Commission Co. and the W. H. Roberts Co., all of Baltimore, and the Phillips Packing Co., Inc., and Phillips Sales Co., of Cambridge, Md.

At the same time, the commission charged the Biddle Purchasing Co., and 13 firms listed as buyers or sellers through the Biddle concern, with violation of the act. It alleged some 2,400 concerns buy through the Biddle company, that selling concerns pay a "so-called" brokerage fee to Biddle, who in turn passes it on to the buyers, in violation of the act.

Sea Explorers Find Volcanoes Under Surface

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Jan. 14.—Discovery of a submerged mountain ridge, three ancient volcanoes and a new deep spot in the Caribbean Sea were reported today by three scientists returning from the Navy Department's underwater exploration of the Caribbean Sea.

The mile-long mountain ridge was the most surprising find of the expedition, according to Lieut. W. A. Gorry, commander of the Navy submarine Barracuda, and Dr. Maurice Ewing, of Lehigh University, who directed the scientific work, since it was found quite unexpectedly in one of the steamer lanes leading to the Panama Canal.

The three new submerged volcanoes, rearing up from the ocean floor to within 2,000 feet of the surface, were found about 120 miles west of the Lesser Antilles Islands and the new deep submarine valley, about 15,999 feet below the surface, was located north of Puerto Rico near the deepest spot in the Atlantic Ocean, the "Nares Deep."

Dr. Ewing and his assistant scientists, Dr. Harry Hess, of Princeton University, and Lieut. A. J. Hoskinson, of the U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey, explained that these findings, however, were chiefly valuable in correcting existing charts of the ocean floor while the results of the expedition's chief work, determination of gravity forces, would not be available until analysis of the records has been completed, a job requiring several months.

Sit-Down Strikes.

The sit-down strikes which have been so effective in closing plants belonging to the General Motors Corporation may prove in the long run to be a boomerang. Superficially viewed they afford a most effective means of enabling a small but determined group of workers to bring operations to a standstill, without the co-operation or even in face of the active opposition of large numbers of fellow workers. However, the revolutionary character of the method alienates public sympathy and may create a lasting schism in the ranks of labor itself.

Evidence is accumulating, indeed, which indicates that the C. I. O. organizers have made too little allowance for the resentment of excluded workers who have no quarrel with their employers. Mr. Lewis' intemperate attacks upon the A. F. of L. craft unions, accused of "scabbing" in ordering their members to return to work, strongly suggests that he is on the defensive and trying to conceal weakness by noisy bluster. It begins to look as if he made a fatal mistake in assuming that the automobile industry could be catapulted into Nation-wide organization along industrial lines.

The sit-down strikes are patently an illegal occupation of property. They set a dangerous precedent which if tolerated on an extensive scale would soon break down our existing social and economic order. For that reason, it is easy to understand why the General Motors management has insisted that evacuation of their factories must precede collective bargaining. Now that the inherent weakness of this high-handed method of procedure is being disclosed, with a mounting flood of protests from those forced out of employment, the danger from a spread of sit-down strikes seems much less serious.

With both sides prepared to modify the conditions on which they are ready to bargain collectively, prospects of a settlement are reasonably good. Under the circumstances, it might be better tactics temporarily to ignore the presence of the sit-down strikers and proceed with constructive discussions. In fact, the company representatives appear to be doing just that, although they have not formally retracted the ultimatum properly delivered to those who have in effect commandeered their plants.

Mature At Five.

The National Home Library Foundation of this city is quietly but jubilantly celebrating its fifth anniversary this week. Born when the book depression was at its height, the foundation can claim to be reaching maturity at an age when most publishing houses are just kicking off their swaddling clothes. But, from the beginning, this literary venture was different. Success does not set it apart so much as its high purpose, adaptability to public needs, and, above all, the crusading spirit of its editor and president, Sherman F. Mittell.

Meeting in Washington, in November of 1931, a small group of booklovers squarely faced the problem of putting good reading matter into the hands of those ordinarily unable to afford books. Their aim was "to promote and inculcate in more people the desire to read good literature; to make home libraries more easily available to greater numbers of our population."

This could, of course, be accomplished in only one way—the manufacture of inexpensive books. Before a year had passed, the foundation had put 1,200,000 books on the market at 15 cents each. Among them were Emerson's Essays, The Merchant of Venice, Treasure Island and The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes. Twenty-five cent editions, clothbound, soon followed. And in 1935, this adventurous group took their most significant step to date—the publication of original works by contemporary authors.

"What the hell," asks William Saroyan in his latest collection of short stories, "is a book?" What good is a book would have been a question much more to the point, considering figures which in 1931 indicated that publishers habitually depended upon less than 1 per cent of the population to purchase their output. In spite of this disheartening statistical fact, or perhaps because of it, the National Home Library Foundation has proceeded enthusiastically in quest of its most desirable objective. Congratulations this week, therefore, are due both the foundation and the book-loving public.

Control Over Expenditures.

The Brownlow committee's criticism of the present system of control and auditing of expenditures is rightly regraded by former Comptroller General McCarl as an attack upon his conduct of that office.

Certainly the committee went out of its way to comment disparagingly upon the failure of the Comptroller General to establish a comprehensive and adequate system of general accounting. It also asserted that many of his rulings go far beyond the terms of any statute. And it devoted a disproportionately large amount of space, considering the condensed and general character of its report, to the defects of the present methods of control and audit.

The committee's objections to combining these two functions under one head are well taken. It undoubtedly is "an undesirable and anomalous situation" for the office that passes upon the legality of expenditures also to audit accounts. Furthermore, the dual functions imposed upon the General Accounting Office are in part responsible for the serious delays in auditing of which the committee complains. It does not follow, however, that a segregation of accounting and auditing rests upon the alleged executive nature of the one and the legislative character of the other.

In accordance with this theory, however, the reorganization report recommends that the settlement of accounts and the supervision of administrative accounting systems should be brought under the executive branch of government—specifically, under the Treasury. Such a proposal would, as Mr. McCarl states, emasculate our independent accounting system and bring into question the authority of Congress to safeguard and prescribe the use to which funds shall be put.

Moreover, the dogmatic assertion that the control of expenditures is an executive function is highly debatable. Such a well-known authority on budgetary and accounting procedure as W. F. Willoughby regards the General Accounting Office as an adjunct of the legislative branch of government, holding much the same relation to Congress as the Bureau of the Budget does to the President. Undeniably the office of Comptroller General was created for the purpose of emancipating the accounting agency from dependence upon the executive branch of government. The practical wisdom of that segregation has been convincingly demonstrated during the past few years of loose and lavish spending.

Since control over the public purse strings is vested in Congress, it seems only logical that Congress should set up a supervisory body to see that its wishes are carried out by executive spending agencies. To vest such authority in the Treasury would in practice mean that subordinate executive officials would be expected to challenge the acts of their superiors. They would undoubtedly be loath to do so. And as appeals to the Attorney General would be made only in case of disputes, the accounting supervision would almost certainly prove to be timorous and ineffective.

The committee's emphasis upon the importance of an independent auditing system is in striking contrast with its eagerness to deprive the Comptroller General of the power to prevent illegal disbursement by advance decisions and preventive measures of various sorts. It is most important to safeguard the integrity of the auditing system. But a check-up after money has been spent is of limited efficacy in preventing illegal dissipation of funds by comparison with a system which acts to forestall unauthorized expenditures.

The committee loses sight of these practical considerations in its zeal for effecting a division of functions in line with a doubtful theory and a still more dubious practical plan for extending executive authority over an independent accounting agency.

Deportation Policy.

Deportation is mandatory when "moral turpitude" is discovered in an alien. This seems reasonable enough.

But cases continually arise similar to the current one involving a Spaniard who, as a youth in Cuba, forged three checks. Fleeing to this country, he was apprehended and returned to his native Spain. After a few years he returned here under the regular quota, his earlier entry and expulsion not being noticed. However, on applying for citizenship papers, he voluntarily recalled his youthful crime. As a result he must again be deported, notwithstanding a creditable record attested by a long string of character witnesses. That Spain will be his destination only adds to the bitterness of his case.

Officials seem to be agreed that this man would now make a desirable citizen. But the law allows them no discretion in the matter, a situation which recalls the heroic efforts of the late Commissioner MacCormack to secure a reasonable discretion for the Department of Labor in handling deportation cases. In particular, he worked strenuously for enactment of the Coolidge-Kerr bill last year. It was lost in the last-minute rush, but a successor bill with certain modifications is soon to come up for consideration.

By its refusal to grant reasonable discretionary powers to the executive the present deportation law is doubly undesirable. It forces the ousting, often under tragic circumstances, of many who would make good citizens. Yet its inevitable loopholes enable more undesirable aliens, whose "moral turpitude" cannot be arbitrarily defined under the statute, to remain.

A National Resources Board.

The Brownlow committee recommends that the present National Resources Committee be converted into a permanent National Resources Board, reporting directly to the President and, upon request, to Congress.

This is a part of the report on administrative management which is obviously logical and constructive. The National Resources Committee has never gone in for high-pressure publicity regarding its purposes and accomplishments. There are probably many people who know nothing of its activities. But a modesty which is highly unusual among New Deal agencies does not mean that this one is at all deficient in social values.

The National Resources Committee has evolved naturally from the fact that there are in the United States some 175,000 different governments—Federal, State and local. It aims to co-ordinate and simplify the work of these governments by serving as a central clearing house through which efficient public policies for the development and utilization of various national resources can be determined. Additionally its function is to co-operate with the State planning boards now established in every Commonwealth except Delaware, and to advise them in their State conservation programs. A further associated activity is to make the information at command available to private agencies interested in any lines of research of national significance.

For this purpose a small, inexpensive and efficient organization has been developed. There is a nonofficial advisory committee, headed by Frederic A. Delano, and a compact staff under the direction of Charles W. Eliot 2d, as executive officer. But much of the vital work is done by a group of technical committees, concerned with land planning, water resources, population problems, transportation requirements and so forth, which are composed partly of governmental officials and partly of experts in private life. These technical committees are formed for the study of particular problems, disbanding when their report to the board is completed. There is thus a high degree of flexibility and a pleasing absence of bureaucratic atmosphere in the organization.

The current recommendation is that the present advisory committee be made a permanent National Resources Board, composed of five members without salary and with indefinite terms, to be appointed by the President and to serve as a central planning agency under him. This board would appoint a director, who would be in charge of "a permanent skeleton staff of career men of undoubted competence," supplemented by details of special experts, from the Government and from private life, as already tentatively worked out.

The function of the present organization is purely advisory, and would remain so under the projected plan. It is emphasized that its duties would continue to focus on the co-ordination of local planning agencies. This co-operative approach, in the well-chosen words of the Brownlow report, would constitute "an important guarantee against overcentralization in governmental planning and against decay of local governmental interest."

In spite of the general emphasis of the Brownlow committee on rigid departmentalization of administrative activities, the proposed National Resources Board would be completely autonomous and detached. This is an eminently reasonable suggestion. It is not its present largely independent character but its temporary and provisional nature which has so far kept this planning agency in the background, enabling the WPA and other spending bureaus to disregard many of its sensible and carefully prepared suggestions for useful forms of work relief.

The other day a man proposed to a girl two minutes after being introduced to her and she accepted him. This is thought to be the first case on record of spontaneous and simultaneous insanity.

Letter-writers to a Detroit newspaper are waging a debate on the subject, "Can a family of five live on $30 a week?" If a family of five has only $30 a week on which to live, the answer is yes.

Games Grow From Customs.

Shailer Mathews in the American Scholar.

In a game one does for fun what one's ancestors did in deadly earnest. In those mid-Victorian days in which youth did not require gasoline engines for its recreations there was a game called "London Bridge Is Falling Down." After certain preliminaries some fortunate boy was asked to choose the girl that he loved best, while the others encouraged him by their singing to bring about a satisfactory denouement. But in that game lay the memory of a tragic custom. If a bridge was not to be destroyed by the evil spirits of a river its foundations had to be laid upon a girl's body. Most of our competitive games perpetuate military maneuvers. That which was once a battle is now a "meet." The hundred-yard dash and other foot races are the civilized descendants of the pursuits of an age when life itself was at stake, and the swinging of a bat against a pitched ball has all the motions but not the same results as the swinging of a club against an enemy's head.

Indeed, a civilization may be judged by its recreations. In a world that has given new value to life, prize-fighting according to rules replaces sports of the arena, and a girls' basketball team is a coefficient of the new equality of the sexes.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am here for a short time and take great pleasure in your paper—so much so that I even read the letters to the editor. And it is satisfying to note that you, too, have among your correspondents the types we do in our Midwestern town.

The Labor Leaders.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A correspondent has offered a reply in your columns to my letter of January 5, captioned "Labor and Politics."

I am accused of ignorance of the labor movement in the United States, but no facts are given to support that gratuitous assertion. It is certainly a matter of deep national concern that in this relatively prosperous republic of ours so many otherwise intelligent men and women are intrigued by the false personalities of overpaid and overpublicized professional labor leaders who, essentially, do not lead, but more accurately "collect" at the expense and at the mental and physical dislodgement of those who are duped.

Mention was made in my recent article of Samuel Gompers, the founder of the American labor movement, and I extolled him as he properly should be extolled.

May I be permitted to say that in contrast with men like Lewis, Green, Curran, Martin and even Bridges, he stands out like a beacon over a lot of smelly candles. Therein I think lies the answer to it all. Gompers was a true and highly discriminating labor leader, but he was also, first and foremost, despite his British origin, an unselfish American devoid of the usual political ambitions, and devoted rationally and religiously to the first and only cause he ever espoused

More Radio Piano.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The letter of January 8 written by Clara Louise John expresses in detail my ideas of radio programs.

We get so much "horse play," so many high tension salesmen and so little piano music which I feel is one of the best features to which one may listen. At times we catch a bit of charming melody only to be thrust back into the "funnies." May we have more piano?

The United States And Spain.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Our sudden termination of commercial relations with Spain, and the lawless molestation of a Spanish merchant vessel in New York harbor on January 6 by United States officials may not have made much material difference in Spain's desperate struggle to preserve the ideal of "government of the people, by the people, for the people." But morally it was a stunning blow. Coming, as it were from behind the lines—a surprise attack—it will probably constitute the last straw in breaking the morale of a nation now shedding its life blood in testing whether it, or any nation conceived in liberty, and so dedicated, can long endure.

The day when nations so conceived shall have perished from the earth was brought appreciably nearer by the (almost) unanimous action of our Congress on January 6—unanimous but for a single stout-hearted and clear-headed "no" from a member from Minnesota. The dissenting voice was virtually drowned out by the raucous chorus of Fascist approval, but its echo will probably return clear and strong in 1940.

The spirit of Abraham Lincoln may look in vain (almost) to our present landslide Congress for any sign of devotion to the cause for which his ragged army gave the last full measure of devotion on the field of Gettysburg.

O. P. SANDBECK.

Moville, Iowa, Jan. 13.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wonder how many Americans understand the political ballyhoo that has been recently pulled off in our midst, in regard to the shipment of planes, motors, etc., to the loyalists in Spain, who represent the party or side which the English and French wish to join in the war which is being waged in that country?

Does any intelligent American citizen believe for one moment that there was the slightest sincerity in the recent remarks uttered in South America in regard to "war devouring us unless we end war?" If we were in the least sincere, would we have made that shipment or allowed a foreign-born individual to involve us in what certainly will be the first step to another war? The fact that this ship was halted and then allowed to go on its way unmolested is so extraordinary that a mere ordinary citizen like myself, who does nothing but pay taxes and help to contribute toward the support of our officials, is roused to comment.

The rather blundering and stupid letters that were sent to every consulate, embassy, etc., in Europe during the absence of Mr. Hull stated that this shipment was going to be made, but that poor old Uncle Sam would like to stop it if he could—this letter was so characteristic that as Togo said "It makes to laugh." The whole blundering affair has done nothing but create more tension and offer one more insult to a country with which we are supposed to be on friendly terms, namely, Germany.

Why should we send this shipment to the side favored by England? Because England cracks the whip and we run around the circus ring just as we always have for dear old England. Hitler has received an ultimatum telling him that he is not to send men or ships or any war materials to the side that he is interested in, in Spain, and yet this very day the French are pouring troops into Spain over the French border. And we, having danced to the crack of the whip, send this boatload of ammunition, airplanes, etc., to the side that England favors. America does not seem to favor either side and would just as soon make shipment to the rebels as to the loyalists if the rebels could put up as much "filthy lucre" as the loyalists; but as I have said before, England does not favor the rebels, and consequently America does not favor the rebels.

When this ship is torpedoed, which it undoubtedly will be, a great cry will rend the heavens and screams will be heard in every direction that Germany has again brought on another World War. The second World War was brought on the instant that ship was allowed to sail out of the three-mile limit beyond the United States.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Our "neutrality" laws are nothing more nor less than an attempt to isolate ourselves from those inflicted with the terrible scourge of war. Good and sensible enough as far as it goes. However, history teaches us that the best and most lasting results are attained in actually eliminating the scourge itself. Let us put just a little more effort along that line of action.

District Inferiority Complex.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Although not now a resident of the District of Columbia, I was born there in 1875. That date of birth and the fact that my father was of considerable prominence in the affairs of the District of Columbia and the city of Washington during that era is probably the reason that the affairs of that small section of land ceded by the State of Maryland holds for me not uncertain interest.

The citizens of the District of Columbia would seem to demonstrate a most excellently developed case of inferiority complex.

This condition may be the natural result of the fact that they have no vote, and are, hence, citizens of the United States of America by courtesy only.

They are taxed without representation, they are tolerated as citizens by the Representatives of the Congress (Senate and the House) whose constituents are free citizens of the Nation, with the right to express disapprobation on law enactments which might "caponize" them, as they have the citizens of the District of Columbia.

In fact, the condition of the citizens of the District of Columbia is comparable to that of those indentured men who, many years past, did so much to build a nation. But with the vast differences that the indentured servant was only held for four years or so as more or less of a slave, while in the District of Columbia it is a life-sentence for the individual and his offspring.

There must be something undeniably true in that this inferiority complex is real.

I do not know how many of the several hundred thousand residents of the District of Columbia are native-born, but there are surely a sufficient number to have produced a two-fisted, fighting leader who would lead them out of "caponhood."

After all, the Senators and Congressmen on Capitol Hill and their constituents are only human beings. There is actually no reason why a citizen of the District of Columbia who pays his heavy taxes, does his day's work, dons the military uniform when wars come, should bend the knee to a greater extent than does any citizen of the 48 States.

GRANT SHEPHERD.

The Maxwell Case.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The sentiments expressed by some of your correspondents since the celebrated Edith Maxwell trial, would indicate that many entertain the opinion that the powers behind that trial were "conceived in sin and born in iniquity" and that her conviction delivered the death blow to our civilization; that the people of Wise County are incapable of seeing justice done, unless that justice coincides with their "code" of grudge and spite; and, that it is the duty of "outsiders" to go in there to correct such errors against society as in their opinions have been made.

If we were to take such sentiments seriously, it would cause us to wonder why our social, welfare, missionary and religious organizations have spent so much time, in all the years past, soliciting funds and workers for the uplift of the heathen of the Orient or the savage of Africa, when for less effort and expense they could have gone to Wise County, Va., and found a county full of them!

I take no stock in such sentiments as that. I consider Wise County just as capable and has just as much right, under our laws, to determine their affairs as the people of any other county in this country, whether it be located in New York, Illinois, Montana, California, Texas or Georgia; and their courts have the same legal standing and should not be attacked and interfered with in the trials of their citizens charged with violating their laws.

Musical Monster

Following are sections of an address broadcast by Deems Taylor over the Columbia Broadcasting System network:

HE was a man who had a gift for getting himself talked about. He was an undersized little man, with a head too large for his body; a sickly little man. His nerves were bad. He had skin trouble. It was agony for him to wear anything next to his skin coarser than silk. And he had delusions of grandeur.

He was a monster of conceit. Never for one minute did he look at the world, or at people, except in relation to himself. He was not only the most important person in the world, to himself; he was the only person who existed, in his own eyes. He believed himself to be one of the greatest dramatists in the world, one of the greatest thinkers, and one of the greatest composers. To hear him talk, he was Shakespeare, and Beethoven, and Plato, rolled into one. And you would have had no difficulty in hearing him talk. He was one of the most exhausting conversationalists that ever lived. An evening with him was an evening spent in listening to a monologue. Sometimes he was brilliant; sometimes he was maddeningly tiresome. But whether he was being brilliant or dull, he had one sole topic of conversation: himself. What he thought and what he did.

It never occurred to him that he and his doing were not of the most intense and fascinating interest to anyone with whom he came in contact. He had theories about almost any subject under the sun, including vegetarianism, the drama, politics and music; and in support of these theories he wrote pamphlets, letters, books—thousands upon thousands of words, hundreds and hundreds of pages. He not only wrote these things, and published them—usually at somebody else's expense—but he would sit and read them aloud, for hours, to his friends and his family.

He wrote operas. And no sooner did he have the synopsis of a story but he would invite—or rather summon—a crowd of his friends to his house and read it aloud to them. Not for criticism. For applause. When the complete poem was written, the friends had to come again, and hear that read aloud: Then he would publish the poem, sometimes years before the music was written that went with it. He played the piano like a composer—in the worst sense of what that implies. And he would sit down at the piano before parties that included some of the finest pianists of his time, and play for them, by the hour—his own music, needless to say. He had a composer's voice. And he would invite eminent vocalists to his house, and sing them his operas, taking all the parts.

He had the emotional stability of a 6-year-old child. When he felt out of sorts, he would rave and stamp, or sink into suicidal gloom and talk darkly of going to the East to end his days as a Buddhist monk. Ten minutes later, when something pleased him, he would rush out of doors and run around the garden, or jump up and down on the sofa, or stand on his head. He could be grief-stricken over the death of a pet dog, and he could be callous and heartless to a degree that would make a Roman emperor shudder.

He was almost innocent of any sense of responsibility. Not only did he seem incapable of supporting himself, but it never occurred to him that he was under any obligation to do so. He was convinced that the world owed him a living. In support of this belief, he borrowed money from everybody who was good for a loan—men, women, friends, or strangers. He wrote begging letters by the score, sometimes loftily offering his intended benefactor the privilege of contributing to his support, and being mortally offended if the recipient declined the honor. I have found no record of his ever paying or repaying money to anyone who did not have a legal claim upon it.

He had a genius for making enemies. He would insult a man who disagreed with him about the weather. He would pull endless wires in order to meet some man who admired his work, and was able and anxious to be of use to him—and would proceed to make a mortal enemy of him with some idiotic and wholly uncalled-for exhibition of arrogance and bad manners. A character in one of his operas was a caricature of one of the most powerful music critics of his day. Not content with burlesquing him, he invited the critic to his house and read him the libretto aloud in front of his friends.

The name of this monster was Richard Wagner. Everything that I have said about him you can find on record—in newspapers, in police reports, in the testimony of people who knew him, in his own letters, between the lines of his autobiography. And the curious thing about this record is that it doesn't matter in the least. Because this undersized, sickly, disagreeable fascinating little man was right all the time. The joke was on us. He was one of the world's great dramatists; he was a great thinker; he was one of the most stupendous musical geniuses that, up to now, the world has ever seen. The world did owe him a living. People couldn't know those things at the time, I suppose; and yet to us, who know his music; it does seem as though they should have known. What if he did talk about himself all the time? If he had talked about himself for 24 hours every day for the span of his life he wouldn't have uttered half the number of words that other men have spoken and written about him since his death.

Jail In Washington.

ON THE WORD of one who has suffered I am able to warn Dr. Frank Townsend, the mahatma of the Old Age Pension Corporation, that the Washington, D. C., jail and its branch store in Virginia seem not to offer the opportunity for rest and quiet meditation which he seeks. The good Doctor, who is wintering in the bleeding-heart and hallelujah sector of Southern California, recently said he would prefer jail to the payment of a fine for contempt of the United States House of Representatives.

Hunt Clement, jr., of the Chattanooga Times, writes me that he is an alumnus of this jail and reports that unless Dr. Townsend is willing to accept special favors, which would tend to discredit his martyrdom, his thirty days in jail would be too crowded with discomfort to permit of calm self-inventory. Of course, the mahatma is a physician, and as such doubtless would be offered the hospitality of the infirmary where Mr. Harry Sinclair, the oil magnate, once did 30 days on the cushions. But Mr. Sinclair's worst enemy never called him an idealist or altruist, and Dr. Townsend claims both titles on his business cards.

Mr. Sinclair had been a junior druggist in his Oklahoma boyhood, and, as if by a miracle, when he matriculated at the D. C. Jail they happened to be in need of a junior druggist 30 years out of practice. Mr. Sinclair suited the emergency exactly, so his sentence became a sojourn, and the news of this stirred Mr. Clement's city editor.

• • • •

"He GOT brilliant," Mr. Clement says, "so I put on some old clothes, swallowed a drink of illicit whisky, strictly in the interests of journalism, got arrested, pleaded guilty and got ten days. But in the District Jail I discovered that Mr. Sinclair lived on a high social plane, and I was going to swallow some soap and get sick and thus break into the infirmary until I saw the soap was so dirty that the bums would not even wash with it.

"I spent the first night with Dad, whose son had had him arrested for breaking up all the son's furniture, and a bald longshoreman from Baltimore. In the morning, as I was concentrating on a plan to crash Mr. Sinclair's exclusive social circle in the infirmary, I was taken out and marked for transfer to Occoquan, Va., where the District of Columbia maintains a workhouse. Mr. Sinclair was not among us. I was a ten-day man, and ten-day prisoners ordinarily were kept in the jail, but the superintendent had been tipped that there was a reporter among the 18 prisoners who came in the day I did. So, instead of finding the reporter, he shipped us all to Occoquan.

"I could have bailed out, but I was mad and curious, and I realized that it would be easier to get out, if I really wanted to, than to get back in. So I was handcuffed to a Negro paperhanger, or check writer, marched to the beautiful Union Station and sent to Occoquan.

"With a few pennies I had concealed I bought some vanilla wafers.

"AT OCCOQUAN, with the temperature at 98, in woolen shirt and undershirt and in shoes three sizes too big, I carried slate to a civilian carpenter on a steep roof. Dad was too old for this, but carried water. The bald longshoreman went to the brick kiln, riding the dinky train from which one afternoon two Negroes fell. One of them, according to whispers in the yard, suffered a broken back, which was discovered after two days' treatment with ammonia in water.

"The lights were kept on all night in the room where we slept in cotton sacks filled with straw. We soon learned, however, to creep into the sacks, because it was less unpleasant to wake up with our ears and mouths full of chaff than to sleep on top of these mattresses. The rafters were not covered and, therefore, were festooned with starlings and sparrows.

"The jail food was terrible, and I would eat a vanilla wafer for breakfast, dinner and supper. One night I woke up crying. I had dreamed that a guard had taken my wafers. That day, I think, I would have killed anyone who had tried to take my vanilla wafers. At that I decided that Sinclair and the Washington Star could go to hell, so I revealed myself, borrowed $2 from the warden to pay my fine and put in that night taking lysol baths in my room back in Washington.

"I was so mad I stayed away from the office two days more. You won't believe it, but the city editor said that from the second day on he forgot all about my being in the D. C. Jail."

Art of Defeat

By William Lyon Phelps

Some time ago I wrote an article in this column on "The Art of Defeat," for, since everybody is occasionally defeated, it is well to know how to "take it." In that article I quoted a few lines from a poem that I called "The Athlete's Prayer," saying that I did not know either the whole poem or the name of the author.

• • • •

I am happy to say that H. D. McCue, of Fishersville, Va., has been kind enough to send me both the author's name and the complete poem. And while he and I both agree that the second and third stanzas add very little to the impact of the thought as expressed in the first, still I am sure my readers will be glad (as I was) to see the whole poem and will share my gratitude to my correspondent. The author is Berton Braley. He was born at Madison, Wis., and has written many books.

Prayer of a Sportsman.

Dear Lord, in the battle that goes on in life,
I ask but a field that is fair,
A chance that is equal with all in the strife,
A courage to strive and to dare;
And if I should win, let it be by the code,
With my faith and my honor held high,
And if I should lose, let me stand by the road
And cheer as the winners go by.

And, Lord, may my shouts be ungrudging and clear,
A tribute that comes from the heart,
And let me not cherish a snarl or a sneer
Or play any sniveling part.
Let me say, "There they ride on whom Laurel's bestowed,
Since they played the game better than I."
And cheer as the winners go by.

So grant me to conquer, if conquer I can,
By proving my worth in the fray,
But teach me to lose like a regular man
And not like a craven, I pray;
Let me take off my hat to the warriors who strode
To victory splendid and high.
Yes, teach me to stand by the side of the road
And cheer as the winners go by.

Paper Clothing.

After the World War, the outside world gazed with interest at the products that Germany had developed to replace blockaded materials, and paper clothing and fabrics were among the more striking and partially successful of those makeshifts born of dire necessity.

Manufacturing a paper product that would stand laundering or resist atmospheric moisture has been the subject of study and experimentation during the years which have elapsed, and now comes a yarn, spun directly from the wood fiber, that is offered for certain uses in competition with linen at well below linen cost, and which has a character of its own, is stronger wet than dry, and will neither stretch nor shrink in laundering or dry cleaning.

Fruitful Meeting

Buenos Aires Conference Yielded Rich Results After Obstructionists Had Bowed To Peace Sentiment Of Masses.

By Paul Vanorden Shaw.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Buenos Aires.

JUST AS the full significance of the seventh Pan-American Conference at Montevideo in 1933 is only being understood because many of the seeds planted there only flowered in Buenos Aires in 1936, so many of the deliberations, resolutions and recommendations and projects of conventions signed during the conference recently adjourned here will be fully comprehended only after a lapse of time. Furthermore, many of the results may prove to be in the realm of imponderables and intangibles and spread over so vast an area that only by patient and time-taking observations will they come to light.

The six main topics, studied and handled by an equal number of committees, can be classified in two main categories. The first three committees devoted themselves to peace and peace machinery; the others to what may be called the props of the peace program.

America is organized for peace, and many gaps in the existing machinery have been filled and the legal and juridical means for preserving peace, re-establishing peace, preventing controversies and wars are more perfect than ever before in the history of the New World. Never before have the 21 nations of America given so patent an expression of continental solidarity nor presented so solid a common front to the older worlds across two oceans. Rarely has so complete a reversal of role in international life taken place as was witnessed in this city. From being the hated and disliked nation of the New World the United States emerges as the willingly accepted leader of the peace and democracy loving folk of America, and the part she used to play now falls to the Argentine. To avoid misunderstanding the underlining of the word "folk" must be understood. Between them and their governments are vast canyons and though many governments follow or lead their people in the new attitude toward Washington [illegible] do not.

Realistic Foundations Built Under Peace Hopes.

IN ORDER to strengthen, complement and insure the working of the peace pacts and peace machinery the leaders and originators of this conference sought to provide them with the realistic foundations which they need for proper functioning. The committees on juridical problems, economic problems and intellectual co-operation approached the problem of peace from the cellar. Peace pacts are futile unless international law becomes again more than a collection and museum of "scraps of paper." It is vain to set up the most perfect peace machinery in the world if the vital and realistic conditions underlying peace are not improved. Thus the aim of the committee on economic problems was of the utmost importance, and if its accomplishments did not measure up to expectations it is because in international as well as in human surgery operations on the heart are still among the most difficult, dangerous and delicate.

Fortunately, however, the committee whose work seemed to be the most uncontroversial and harmless and which was able to agree on more than 30 of the 70 projects signed, is the one which in the long run may prove to have been the most helpful in buttressing the whole program of peace and continental solidarity. This is the committee on intellectual co-operation. Its fingers shot out in all directions and touched many vital agencies in providing the intellectual and moral atmosphere which must prevail if peace and amity are to continue. This committee passed resolutions on the press, radio, cinema, art, schools, women, scouts, and on many other instruments which can contribute to the cause.

These may be called the more direct achievements of the conference. The indirect are perhaps no less important and one of the most striking was the contrast between the American and the European and Asiatic continents which the conference provided. Almost all the delegates commented on this fact proudly, hoping that the lesson might be influential abroad. There is no doubt that underneath the surface there was a popular revival of interest in democracy and that a system of government which was looked upon as moribund was discovered to be alive and kicking.

Lessons in statesmanship were learned by many of the younger leaders of Latin-American states. Their personal contacts with the President of the United States and with the foreign ministers or secretaries of leading powers; their introduction to continental problems and their visit to one of the livest and most attractive cities in the world are experiences which will not be forgotten so easily. Many of them came to understand the difference between honest difference of opinion and purely personalist or obstructionist policy. They learned that the United States can be conciliatory and that one of their own number could be obstreperous and obdurate. They heard plain, uncensored and frank speaking on many subjects which in their own countries are taboo. They witnessed with their own eyes some of the real virtues of United States' democracy being practiced right before them.

Map Of Americas Changed By Assembly.

IN ANOTHER REALM the conference changed the political and diplomatic map of America. There does not seem to be any doubt that the pro-European and pro-League of Nations bloc was considerably weakened. Argentine, Uruguay and Chile were in fair accord on these two questions. Uruguay changed perceptibly in the course of the conference and Chile's post-rapprochement with Brazil may indicate that Chile's attitude may undergo a change which will be expressed in this roundabout way.

The United States and Brazil are not only on their old footing but relations between the two countries seem to be more cordial than ever. And for a wonder Cuba, Haiti and the Central American states did not come to the conference breathing fire and brimstone but freely and cordially supported the United States. It would seem that the gains of the United States, and these were considerable, were the losses of the Argentine and because of this one conjectures as to the future of Argentine-American relationships. These will improve considerably if the opponents of Don Carlos Saavedra Lamas are successful in forcing him out of the government and in bringing some sense into Argentine's foreign policy.

If the conference does not seem to have performed miracles, in part this is due to the very fact that the conference itself was an extraordinary event in all-American life. That fact must not be forgotten. Launched by President Roosevelt in January of 1936 in what, by many, was considered or interpreted to be a gesture for home political consumption the idea was enthusiastically picked up by the Latin-American governments, as though they were clutching at saving straws. Then the enemies of an American accord, of democracy and of peace got busy and few understand the efforts which were made to sabotage the conference before it met.

But despite all efforts the conference convened, conversed and conquered. New principles of international life and action were advanced and accepted, in all cases, by the 21 nations of the New World. Old principles and ideals were pushed several notches forward and the continuity of Pan American life became clearer. One Pan American Conference leads to another and the seed planted in one becomes the flower in the next. Buenos Aires would never have succeeded without Montevideo, nor these without all the others that go back to 1889 and 1826.

Conference At Lima Will Climax Efforts.

IF THE BOND holds, the coming Lima conference of 1938 will be the capstone of the one which has just concluded. Continental solidarity was practised at Buenos Aires and proved to be stronger than the influence of Great Britain, Italy, Germany, Japan and the League of Nations plus the Argentine. It was a compelling force. In spite of constant and determinded efforts to keep America from presenting a solid front to the world a solid front to the world is one of the results of this conclave.

Free State Plan

By Liam Lenihan

The New Constitution.

IN ABOLISHING the last pretense of the King's prerogatives and recognizing the Crown in the province of external affairs only, the Irish Free State acted within its rights as set forth in the Statute of Westminster. That piece of legislation authorized the Free State to legislate with sovereign authority unhampered by the Anglo-Irish treaty, although the Irish Constitution of 1922 made that pact the supreme law of the land.

Now Eamonn de Valera, the Free State's chief executive, proposes to introduce a new constitution which, unlike the earlier one of 1922 will deal solely with domestic affairs. In framing it, the one overriding consideration kept in view was to equip the Free State with an instrument of government specially adapted to Irish conditions and calculated to function with the minimum of discord.

"I would like to say," the chief executive declared recently, "that fundamental in the constitution is the idea that all powers of government emanate from and abide with the Irish people alone."

With this end in view there will be at the base of the scheme the elective Chamber or Dail which will be chosen through the existing adult franchise and in which, in the last resort, supreme power would reside.

• • • •

REGARDING the need for a second house, Eamonn de Valera executed an about-face. Pushing through the abolition bill last May which gave the Irish Senate a legislative funeral, he had declared: "We are merely carrying out the mandate of the people. Th Senate was a menace. The idea of a second chamber in many countries was not fear of the people's representatives in Parliament—but fear of the people themselves, fear of democracy . . ."

Now, recognizing that there is a widespread desire for a second chamber, he makes provisions in the constitution for the setting up of one which would be constituted partly on a vocational basis and which would be entrusted with powers of revision with regard to legislation.

One thing, however, Eamonn de Valera made clear: this second chamber will not have the power it exercised heretofore.

"I think that there is a remarkable unanimity of opinion that these powers must be such that they will not enable a senate that wants to adopt a factious attitude to curb or interfere with the primary house and the government in carrying out the will of the people," he declared.

The Irish executive holds that there is nothing in this proviso to which anyone of democratic instincts can take objection. He said that a second chamber of this sort can fulfill a very useful function by reviewing the details of legislation from a new angle and by bringing its specialized knowledge to bear on them.

AT THE APEX of this governmental pyramid will be a president. "The First Citizen and Chief Magistrate of the land," de Valera declared, "will selected by the vote of the Irish people. He will have certain powers which he will exercise on his own responsibility and certain powers which he will exercise on the advice of the government.

The minority report of the commission set up to investigate the need for a second chamber recommended that there should be a referendum—power of appealing to a referendum by a majority in the senate over all measures. This was ruled out but the chief executive explained that there will be a provision for taking a referendum if it is proposed to make alterations in the constitution which, after it has received the approval of the people, might be regarded as a fundamental law of the State.

Only one reference was made by Eamonn de Valera to "the other Ireland" in his address outlining the new constitution.

"Unilateral action is not going to end partition," he said, "and it will not get the British out of our ports. These are things we cannot do at present, at any rate. We will do everything in our power to solve these things as time goes on. But I will not be forced to take up a position one inch in front of the position I think we can hold."

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The Ski Jumper.

He was, he thought,
An outdoor man;
A vital guy
With cheek of tan.

He swam and golfed
When it was hot
And leaped on skis
When it was not.

The skiing craze
Came to him late—
And helps explain
His bitter fate.

• • • •

"Oh boy!" he cried,
His face aglow,
At ski stars in
The newsreel show.

He saw 'em leap,
He saw 'em land,
And cried, "What fun!"
And cried, "How grand!"

He hied him to
A sport goods store
And bought the things
The ski men wore.

He read the books
Called "How to Ski,"
And said, "It seems
A pipe to me!"

Some lessons from
A man he took;
(The man, he too,
Had read a book!)

"And now," he said,
"I guess I'll go
Where there's more ice—
Where there's more snow."

Aboard the ski
Train did he rush
To join the week-end
Ski-train crush.

Tall tales he heard
Of leaps through air;
"Are those," he chirped,
"Considered fair?"

• • • •

The train pulled in
And he pulled out
To show 'em what
'Twas all about.

Far up the sky
They saw him soar,
And heard him cry,
"Excelsior!"

• • • •

Then down he came,
"Hi lee! Hi lo!"
So dauntless through
The flying snow!

The slide was long,
The slide was deep . . .
"And now I guess,"
He said, "I'll leap!" . . .

The District Crisis

Question of Suffrage Reopened in Capital

Jacobs Report Calling For Advisory Council Welcomed Provided Citizens Only Make Up Its Membership.

The Post presents the fifth of a series of articles on the problems of the District of Columbia.

By Merlo J. Pusey.

THE QUESTION of suffrage for the District was thrown into the arena of current discussion by the Jacobs Committee. Even if that group had ignored the issue, however, it would have been thrust to the fore by the threat of an enormous increase in taxes. Voting is traditionally associated in the American mind with the exercise of the taxing power, for the very good reason that taxes vitally affect so large a percentage of the people.

MERLO J. PUSEY.

Congress did not ask the Fiscal Relations Committee for advice as to the extension of the franchise to residents of Washington. But the committee felt that the problems of fiscal relationship are so interwoven with the suffrage issue that the latter could not be reasonably ignored. For the first time in recent years, therefore, Congress is confronted by a request from the President to consider proposals that would grant District residents the right of electing their own municipal authorities.

The effect of this advice is to open the entire question of suffrage here to discussion from a new angle. Most of the local groups recently agitating the franchise issue have concentrated their efforts in a demand for national representation—the privilege of electing Senators and Representatives for the District and casting ballots for Presidential and Vice Presidential candidates. That, of course, would require a constitutional amendment. Since no such change in the organic law can be reasonably anticipated in the near future, the Jacobs report may be regarded as a timely bit of advice to these groups to shift their point of view, or at least their emphasis.

On general principles, disfranchisement of approximately 400,000 persons of voting age simply because they live in the Capital of the world's greatest democracy seems to be utterly inexcusable. Alaska, Hawaii and Puerto Rico have their own legislative assemblies and send their delegates to Congress. Only the Canal Zone, Guam, American Samoa and the District of Columbia have no self-government, no suffrage and no voice in the National Legislature.

Plight Of District Has Not Been Missed.

THE ANOMALOUS plight of the District has been recognized from the year of its establishment. Available evidence suggests that the founding fathers never dreamed Washington would grow to its present size without the political rights which they prized so highly. Throughout the years, however, the problem of changing the District's status has appeared more formidable to Congress than tacit reconciliation of this limited disfranchisement with democracy.

Any realistic analysis of the suffrage problem must take account of these difficulties which have forestalled Congressional action. Since the District is not a State and can never become one—if the original purpose of its creation is to be served—Congress is not willing to grant it equal representation with the States in the Senate. That objection to "national representation" for the District cannot be easily overcome. In recent proposals an attempt has been made to mitigate opposition on this ground by providing that Congress could grant us the privilege of electing one or two Senators. Obviously, senators chosen under this arrangement would tend to be subservient to the majority in Congress which would have authority to take away their seats.

It is not the purpose of this article, however, to review the argument for or against a constitutional amendment giving the District voting representation in Congress. Even if that may be considered the ultimate objective of District residents, hope of its early attainment is too flimsy to give that plan any practical value in the present emergency. On the same basis this line of reasoning is applicable to the request for suffrage in Presidential elections, which would also include a constitutional amendment.

Turning then to the question of choosing a local government, it seems to me that the advice of the Jacobs committee merits thoughtful consideration. In brief, its suggestion is:

The section of the statute granting local suffrage to the District residents might include the power to elect a municipal council to legislate on matters concerning the plan and structure of local administrative organization, authority for the formulation and administration of the operating and capital improvement budgets, revenue and expenditure control and the enactment and enforcement of local regulatory ordinances. By these means, control and responsibility for services and costs would be squarely upon the District government itself and the power and right to maintain or change the government would be in the people of the District.

Territorial Plan Seen As Inadequate.

AT LEAST this skeletonized plan appears to be more in line with needs of the local community than Senator Clark's proposed "territorial government." Washington is not comparable to the far flung territories over which the Government maintains a loose administrative check. If a local government "of the people" is to be set up here, it should be most carefully devised to fit the peculiar requirements of a highly developed Capital City. However, Senator Clark's plan to give the District a delegate in the House, if properly adapted to the local set-up, should provide a useful liaison between the city fathers and Congress.

It is well to recognize at the outset that the operation of a popular government in this area where the Nation has extensive interests and Congress must retain ultimate control, would be an extremely difficult task. Congress would undoubtedly insist upon controlling major policies, as indeed it should where predominantly Federal interests are involved. Since the dividing line between local and national interests is often very tenuous and in some cases indistinguishable, the danger of friction between an elected council and Federal authorities would be ever present.

Some of these difficulties would probably be minimized if a clear division could be effected between national and local functions. I have previously pointed out the desirability of shifting all activities of municipal government to the local authorities. With that reform consolidated by the force of law and tradition, a popular government would certainly have a better opportunity to operate smoothly within its own sphere. And Congress might be more inclined to confine its local acts to general policies affecting national interests.

Possibly considerations of this sort were in the minds of the Fiscal Relations Committee members when they reported:

"It is believed that the granting of broader powers over local affairs should be awarded in two major stages. Pending the granting of local suffrage, there should be created immediately an advisory council consisting of representatives of the Federal and District governments and representative citizens of civic groups appointed by the President, such council to advise on the planning of municipal services and improvements, the original preparation of the District budget, the determination of tax and revenue sources, and the improvement of administrative organization and procedures and continuing consultation on other matters affecting local governmental operations, expenditures and results.

Further Study Best Hope In 75th Congress.

STRONG ARGUMENTS can be found to support the policy of advancing one step at a time. Certainly the Jacobs committee has not provided a sufficient foundation on which to build a new local government. The most that can be even hoped for at the present session of Congress is enactment of a revised version of Senator Clark's measure, thus committing Congress to the policy of establishing a popular municipal—as opposed to territorial—government here, and ordering a study of the precise form it should take. And only the most optimistic enthusiasts over local suffrage will be inclined to let their hopes run that far.

While the more distant objectives are clarifying, however, it seems to me that the suggestion concerning an advisory council can be adapted to very constructive use. I can scarcely see why the committee wishes to weight down such a council with Federal and District representatives; for national agencies already have too many fingers in the local pie, and very little can be gained by having District officials advise themselves through a council. Would not this agency be far more useful if composed of representative citizens chosen by the President to reflect the will of the people, so far as that is possible?

A Citizens' Advisory Council established here in 1925 served as "de facto representative" of the people with considerable success. Extension of the idea embodied in that plan, this time under the sanction of law, holds promise of being particularly helpful when the local community is passing through a fiscal crisis. Of course, the council's duties would be closely restricted to fact finding and giving advice. In the absence of any Federal representative, there could be little friction and no undue official pressure in case the local authorities decided not to accept the council's suggestions.

For reasons already mentioned it does not seem to me that the proposed National Capital Planning Commission could properly exercise this function. A body composed of Federal, District and civic representatives with power to prepare the local budget of capital improvements, to allocate certain expenses between national and local taxpayers and to advise the Commissioners on all matters, might tend to become a second local government. The need is for concentration of more and not less power in the Board of Commissioners.

The proposal of Commissioner Allen to take referendums among District residents on vital questions of policy for the advice of the governing body might also prove a useful step toward more responsible government. The present board has already taken the commendable attitude that it is here to represent and serve the people so far as their will can be ascertained. With more effective means of determining public opinion on vital questions a considerable measure of self-government might be attained without a grant of suffrage.

In my opinion the advantages to be gained from these immediate steps overshadow, at least for the present, any vague hopes that may arise from the contemplation of sweeping reforms in the relatively distant future.

F. R. Wadleigh, Coal Expert, Dies in Alexandria Hospital

Francis Rawle Wadleigh, 73, consulting engineer and internationally renowned as an expert on coal, died yesterday in the Alexandria Hospital. He had been ill for several months.

A close personal friend of former President Hoover, Mr. Wadleigh in 1931 was placed in charge of an investigation of coal resources in Alaska. He served under Hoover as chief of the coal division of the Department of Commerce.

Since last June Mr. and Mrs. Wadleigh had been living in a historic house in Alexandria, which had been purchased as a museum by the United Daughters of the Confederacy.

Mr. Wadleigh was attracted by the appearance of the house when he visited his physician, Dr. Carson L. Fifer, 904 Prince street, and persuaded the Alexandria Chapter, Daughters of the Confederacy, to rent him a second-floor room which extended the length of the house. He explained he wanted to be near his physician's office.

Born in Muncy, Pa., October 25, 1863, Mr. Wadleigh graduated from Princeton University and went to work as a shop apprentice with the Pennsylvania Railroad. Later he became a locomotive fireman. In 1897 he became assistant to the president of the Chesapeake & Ohio Coal & Coke Co. During the World War he served in the supply division of the Emergency Fleet Corporation.

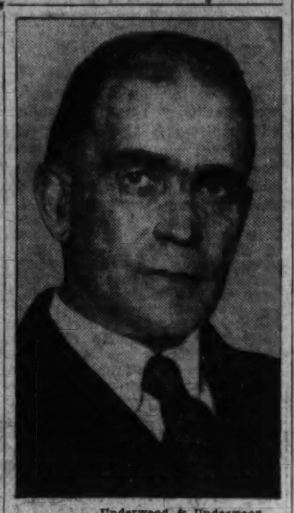

He served as assistant to the Federal fuel distributor in 1922, and became Federal fuel distributor in 1923. In 1930 he established the Wadleigh Bureau, Inc., here. He was appointed a member of the retail coal code authority under the NRA. At the time of his death Mr. Wadleigh was consulting engineer for the Great Southern Coal & Coke Mining Corporation.

Mr. Wadleigh was a fellow of the American Geographic Society and the Royal Society of Arts, and a member of the American Society of Mining Engineers, American Chemical Society, American Mining Congress, Academy of Political Science, Academy of Fine Arts, American Museum of Natural History, New York Zoological Society, Pan-American Society of the United States and Franklin Institute.

He was the author of several technical works on coal.

Funeral services will be held at Old Blandford Church, Petersburg, Va., tomorrow at 3 p. m. Burial will be in Blandford Cemetery.

Surviving Mr. Wadleigh are his wife, the former Mariana Rogers, of Petersburg, and three children, Francis Rawle Wadleigh, jr., of Larchmont, N. Y.; Mrs. Ivan J. Watson, of New York City, and Mrs. L. P. Cottman, of Larchmont.

Miss Beall's Rites Scheduled Today

Funeral rites for Miss Virginia Louise Beall, of 507 Roxboro place, a resident of Washington since 1906 and a retired employe of the Geological Survey, will be held at Gowlers' undertaking establishment this afternoon at 2 o'clock, followed by burial in Union Cemetery, Rockville.

Miss Beall, who retired in 1933, after 24 years of service with the Survey, was descended directly from Col. Ninia Beall, who came to America from Scotland in 1674 and settled in what is now Prince Georges County, moving later to Georgetown.

She was a member of the Colonial Dames and the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Surviving are four sisters, Mrs. Jessie Joyes, Mrs. W. A. Wallace, Mrs. Joseph Mann and Mrs. R. V. Willett, and two brothers, Charles W. and Goldsborough Beall.

Mrs. Patterson, Lincoln Expert, Dies in Illinois

Mrs. Amy J. Patterson, for many years a resident of the District, died yesterday at Villa Grove, Ill., at the home of a sister, Mrs. Nathaniel Pangburn. She was 90 years old.

A descendant of the Randolph-Pangburn family of Massachusetts and New Jersey, Mrs. Patterson was the great-granddaughter of Nathaniel Randolph, who was instrumental in the founding of Princeton University, for which he donated the land for the campus in 1748.

Mrs. Patterson's memories went back to the time when Abraham Lincoln was a comparatively obscure lawyer. Her father was clerk of the court at Danville, Ill., in the Eighth Judicial Circuit, where Lincoln often appeared. He usually showed up on horseback or in the company of other lawyers seated in a three-seated spring wagon. There were no railroads in the circuit until 1854.

Lincoln sometimes took her on his knee, she used to recall, and in many ways showed his interest in children, his indifference to formal stiffness and other qualities for which he is traditionally noted.

An authority on Lincolniana, Mrs. Patterson contributed a wealth of previously unrecorded data, including Lincoln's habit of using his "stove-pipe" hat for a brief case.

Profit to Doherty Is Denied in Trial

New York, Jan. 14 (AP).—How profits in the sales of Cities Service stock went to the Securities Corporation, a wholly owned subsidiary, was explained today in the trial of a suit against Henry L. Doherty and his interests on charges of misusing stockholders' money.

Joseph M. Proskauer, associated with John W. Davis in the defense, remarked at one point: "Mr. Doherty never took any profit personally for the services rendered Cities Service."

Six plaintiffs, holders of 840 shares of stock, are seeking recovery of $20,500,000 from Doherty and an accounting of alleged losses of $80,000,000 from the directors.

Old Stereopticon Principle Brings Better Microscope

By the Associated Press.

Rochester, N. Y., Jan. 14.—A world 2,000 times natural size, with the third dimension of depth revealed in accurate proportions for the first time by a new microscopical technic, was described today by Profs. Louis C. Martin and T. Russell Wilkins, of the University of Rochester Institute of Optics.

The view ordinarily seen through the high-powered microscope is perfectly flat without the least suggestion of depth or height, explained the scientists. Previous attempts to give an illusion of depth have either exaggerated or minimized the third dimension out of proportion to the other two dimensions.

Drs. Martin and Wilkins for the first time have made the microscopist feel as if he himself, greatly shrunken in size, were standing in a world in which germs and body cells maintain their proper thickness and distance from his eyes like so many objects in a room.

The principle, said the scientists, is the same as that involved in operation of the stereoptican, with which hostesses of a bygone day used to entertain callers.

The apparatus was developed to intercept cosmic ray plates recovered from the stratosphere and has wide possibilities from the research specialist and science teacher, Drs. Martin and Wilkins said.

Miss Forbes, Long Teacher, Dies at Home

Services Will Be Tomorrow at 11 A. M.; Burial at Baltimore.

Miss Margaret E. Forbes, for 50 years a teacher in the District's public schools, died yesterday at her residence, 406 A street southeast, after a brief illness. She was 82 years old.

A native of Washington, Miss Forbes was appointed to the school system in 1873 and was assigned to a school then located at Ninth and K streets southeast. Some years ago the building was razed, and the Board of Education records fail to list its name.

The year 1882 found Miss Forbes teaching at the Graham School, and eight years later she was transferred to the Brent School, where she stayed until 1895. After a decade spent at the Maury School she was again transferred to Brent, where she taught until her retirement in June, 1925.

Retirement, however, did not dampen Miss Forbes' interest in her many activities. She served on the ladies' board of Casualty Hospital, was a member of the Society of Natives and an active worker in the affairs of the Church of Covenant.

Surviving her are a sister, Mrs. Ann English, of Berkeley, Calif; a nephew, E. B. English, of this city; two nieces, Mrs. Virginia Phillips and Miss Marie English, of Berkeley, and a brother-in-law, Clinton Davis, of Washington.

Funeral services will be held at the residence at 11 a. m. tomorrow. Burial will follow at Greenmount Cemetery, Baltimore.

Mrs. Chambers, 92, Rites Tomorrow

The widow of Lieut. Benjamin Dill Chambers, a retired Point of Rocks, Md., business man who served in the Union Army throughout the War Between the States, Mrs. Chambers moved here from Point of Rocks several years ago. She was the mother of the Rev. B. Duvall Chambers, pastor of the Roxbury (Va.) Westover Episcopal Church, frequently attended by the Byrd family.

Despite her advanced years, Mrs. Chambers was active in St. Margaret's Episcopal Church and the Daughters of the American Revolution. She was a sister of the late Dr. Edward Oliver Belt, one of the founders of the Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital.

Surviving Mrs. Chambers, besides the Rev. Chambers, are two other sons, John Wesley Chambers and Alfred Coke Chambers, and a daughter, Miss Eleanor McGill Chambers, all of Washington. She also has two sisters, Mrs. L. A. White and Miss Julia Belt, and a brother, McGill Belt.

Funeral services will be held at the home of her sons, 3822 Thirty-ninth street northwest, tomorrow morning at 9:30 o'clock, followed by burial in St. Paul's Cemetery, Point of Rocks.

Cochran Quits Manager's Post With National

Friction With Theater's Controlling Interests Cause Resignation.

S. E. (Steve) Cochran has submitted his resignation as manager of the National Theater and will retire tomorrow from the theater with which he has been affiliated for more than 30 years, it was learned yesterday.

Cochran's resignation followed several months of strained relations with Leonard Bergman, executor for the Abe Erlanger estate, which owns a controlling interest in the National Theater.

Edmund Plohu, of New York, has been named as Cochran's successor. He was last in Washington as manager of "The Two Mrs. Carrolls" company.

Local theatrical circles were shocked by the announcement of Cochran's resignation. He was regarded as one of the most capable theater manager in the country, and it was recalled that he succeeded in keeping the National open for 30-week seasons during the depression, when theaters in other cities were operating on six-week seasons.

He became manager of the National 15 years ago following the death of William Fowler. Previously he had been treasurer of the theater.

Cochran established summer stock companies at the National, and is reported to have paid more than $130,000 in rent to the Erlanger interests for use of the theater during the "dead" months.

The split with the New York office resulted from Cochran's insistence that he be allowed to interpret the amusement needs of this city.

Cochran told friends he has no intention of leaving Washington, and will concentrate his efforts on summer stock ventures. He will continue to operate the National Academy of Stage Training, which has contributed in the past to the personnel of his stock companies. His son, Joseph, will assist him.

Cochran has been associated with the theater in Washington since he was 9 years old. Before going to the National he was connected with the Belasco Theater.

NEW YORK, JAN. 14.

YOUTH: The Eastern premiere of Deanna Durbin's new picture, "Three Smart Girls," is scheduled for a Boston theater sometime next week. For the past ten days an intensive publicity campaign has been waged in the Hub City to lure all kids for miles around to attend Hollywood's newest child-star's first film . . . Yesterday, the feature-act for the theater's stage show was announced. It will be—Sally Rand!

ENTERPRISE: She's a waitress here for one of a national chain of restaurants. This is her salary note for one day: "Unemp. Comp. Earnings, $1.66. Less tip-value, 50c. Earnings for Fed. Tax, $1.16. . . . Less Meal Value, 33c, and Old Age Tax, 1 per cent, 1c. . . . Total Deductions, 34c. Net amount paid, 82c.

CAST: Sid Silvers reminisced for Variety last week, and discussed the occasion when he and Phil Baker were engaged to entertain at a party for the Stotesburys. Irving Berlin, who just had married Ellin Mackay, was one of the guests present and seemed to feel ill at ease. At that time Long Island society hadn't, as yet, become reconciled to an outsider—gifted in talents but still an outsider . . . Silvers whispered into the ear of Harry Rosenthal, whose band was furnishing the music for the occasion. Rosenthal took the hint. All night long he played nothing but hit-songs composed by Irving Berlin.

ACCLAIM: Last week Helen Hayes was awarded the National Speech Arts Fellowship gold medal for her most excellent diction and voice expression in 1936. Miss Hayes intended to acknowledge the award Monday evening as part of her broadcast . . . Ruth Gordon substituted that radio program—because Helen Hayes contracted laryngitis.

CHATTER: Bobby Clark will be featured in the new Sam Goldwyn Follies . . . Now that Fay Webb's death has removed all legal difficulties, Rudy Vallee will go to the Coast . . . Ernest Hemingway arrived here last night, en route to Spain . . . Noel Coward and Gertrude Lawrence have spurned the highest offers ever made for night-club entertainment—$7,500 a week . . . Josephine Huston will follow Belle Baker at the Hollywood . . . Michael Farmer phoned John Perona from Paris last night and confessed that he was bored. "Come here," Perona suggested. And so Farmer is taking the first boat to America . . . Ken Murray's friend, Florence Heller, gave him an unusual Xmas gift—a set of electric trains!

Columbia Pictures Hold National Conclave This Afternoon Over a Loudspeaker Telephone Hookup

Unique Conference Among Sales Executives, Directors and Stars Will Inaugurate Three-Month Sales Drive; Ceremonies Will Be Held in Office of District Manager, Sam A. Galanty; Architect Eberson a Twin of Victor Herbert; Some Ladies Objects; Gossip of the Playhouses.

FOR the first time in the history of the motion picture industry, New York sales executives and Hollywood stars will talk with their representatives all over the United States in a special telephone hookup conference at 5 o'clock this afternoon.

This unusual event, so I am told by that high-strung Southern gentleman, Sam Galanty, Washington district manager, will inaugurate a sales campaign in honor of Columbia Pictures' general sales manager, Abe Montague. The period from January 17 to May 1 will encompass an intensive sales campaign which it is expected will produce a record of results that will exceed anything of its like in the annals of the picture business.

BELL.

Leading exhibitors will assemble in the office of Sam Galanty, who will plug in his phone at the stipulated hour. Over the phone, which will be attached to a loudspeaker, will come then the voices of Jack Cohn, vice president of Columbia; Abe Montague, sales executives, J. McConville and R. Jackter; Frank Capra, ace director; Grace Moore and other of the Columbia stars. In this unique manner the entire Columbia personnel will be enabled to listen in on the inauguration of the sales campaign of which so much is expected.

During the three months during which this sales drive will continue Columbia will put much of its prize product on the market, including Grace Moore's "When You're in Love," Frank Capra's "Lost Horizon," starring Ronald Colman; Virginia Bruce and Melvyn Douglas in "Women of Glamour," and "Devil's Playground," starring Dolores Del Rio.

Mr. Galanty announces that when released, these features will be presented for their first runs in the Earle Theater.

It is worthy of note again—I think we made the same observation on the occasion of the dedication of the Penn Theater, which he also designed—that John Eberson, architect, who planned the newly opened Sheridan Theater, fifteenth local unit on the Warner Brothers circuit, bears so striking a resemblance to the late Victor Herbert as to be mistaken anywhere for his twin, if not for Herbert himself. Incidentally, in the Sheridan, Mr. Eberson has displayed an originality in decorative treatment that is worth a royal accolade. There is, or should be, something about all this in another column on this page.

The presumably Misses Martha M. Oser, Gertrude Wolfberg and Adelaide S. Schiff, who write from 809 Emerson street northwest, are perturbed over the implications of our last Sabbath's lead.

They wish to know what box-office has to do with artistic integrity and why Lillian Hellman's play of "The Children's Hour" was better on the screen, under the title of "These Three," than upon the stage of the National recently when it presnted a theme of some repugnance to a great many intelligent observers.

The gist of the ladies' complaint seems to lie in the last paragraph of their joint letter, which reads: "Perhaps you remember that a great poet once said that truth is beauty."

I seem to recall having heard some such thing, but I still do not quite seem able to harmonize the idea with an exposition of the sinister suggestiveness of Lesbianism.

* * * *

I have been trying for days to find an opportunity to say something about the January 7 issue of the Film Daily, which celebrates in elaborate fashion the voting of something in excess of 500 critics in the fifteenth annual poll to determine the "ten best pictures of the year." The issue in question presents an interesting and completely "broken down" resume of the national balloting and discloses a remarkable unanimity of view on the part of half a thousand observant commentators. It does not reveal that any critic hit the nail exactly on the head by naming all ten of the winners in his individual list, but it does indicate a solidity of opinion that ought to be of value to the film industry in the years to come.

* * * *

When Fred Thomas assumed the position of manager of the Warner Brothers' new Sheridan Theater, on Georgia avenue, between Sheridan and Rittenhouse streets, last night, his place at the Colony Theater, a little nearer intown on the same arterial highway, was filled by Lawrence E. Smoots, who has been acting as assistant manager of the Penn Theater.

Earl Heatwole, Thomas' assistant manager at the Colony, moves to the Sheridan in the same capacity. Clyde Abel is transferred from the Avenue Grand to the Penn Theater, to take Smoots' place. To the Avenue Grand goes James Conner, chief of service at the Metropolitan, whose post at the F street house will be filled by Ralph Tobin, moved up a notch from assistant chief of service.

That is how it is that the boys move up, slowly, but more or less surely under the general directorship of John J. Payette, Warner Brothers' zone manager for the Washington territory.

Johnny Weissmuller and Lupe Velez, headlining the stage bill at Loew's Capitol for the week beginning today, arrived at the Shoreham yesterday afternoon and were hosts to as many of the local press as could escape their official duties for a few moments in the face of the opening of the Sheridan, Representative Dickstein's showing of "Black Legion" and a few other minor items of professional procedure. Last midnight they could have been found rehearsing routines for today's performance under the guidance of Gene Ford, backstage at the Capitol.

New York Holds 70 In Policy Cleanup

Concluding a series of raids begun last night, Dewey disclosed he had arrested 70 members of a ring he said annually gleaned $5,000,000 in pennies, nickles and dimes from more than 75,000 hopeful victims.

While removing a scaffold on the roof of the new Trans-Lux Theater at Fourteenth street and New York avenue northwest, Vincenzo Di Battista, 40, of 1924 Benning road northeast, was injured seriously yesterday.

Battista plunged from the roof to the second floor when he stepped on the end of a plank, overbalancing it. He was taken to Emergency Hospital where preliminary examination showed he suffered a fractured left hip and severe skull and pelvis injuries. Physicians said his condition is serious.

Gag Parties.

HOLLYWOOD Jan. 14

You hear so much about Hollywood parties, you must be convinced this town is 90 per cent play and 10 per cent work. And there have been movies to strengthen such an opinion—so bad, I mean, that they looked like 10 per cent work. But truly there are few big social events here. The impression of wild and furious night life is wrongly created by the scads of publicity that attends each party. Even the swank Mayfair Ball, long the town's ermine-wrap blow-off, has been discontinued for lack of interest. As for Mary Pickford's radioed "Parties at Pickfair"—well, they were so drab that tuner-inners became tuner-outers.

The honest-to-goodness bees of Hollywood are hosted by an energetic blonde star, a dour-puss comedian, and a director—Carole Lombard, Edward Everett Horton, and W. S. Van Dyke. For the most part, they give "gag parties." Carole's latest, for instance, was a "Hospital Drag."

Arriving guests were outfitted with nurses' uniforms, food was served on operating tables, cocktails were poured from hot water bottles. Mid-evening, Miss Lombard came in on a stretcher, which scared the socks off a producer in whose picture she was currently working.

Van Dyke's socials are free-for-alls. Stars are seated next to office boys, and if an office boy complains he is thrown into the swimming pool. Too well-dressed guests are thrown in anyway, just for luck.

And those champagne breakfasts of Eddie Horton's! There, my friend, is something! Fifteen-year-old champagne, Southern-fried chicken, and almost any dainty the customers may desire. After that, horseback rides over the comedian's ranch.

Although less than 1 per cent of the finished positive movie prints have imperfections, studios employ staffs of girls to check each print carefully. All day long, these girls keep their eyes glued to a small screen. One of them once told me that she often looks at as many as fifty prints of the same picture. Which makes what happened yesterday very amusing. As I passed the door of such a department at MGM, a vivacious redhead was saying to a work-mate, "Boy have I got a swell date for tonight!" "Yeah," came the answer, "What're yuh going to do?" The redhead said without a quiver, "We're going to the movies."

Warners Open The Sheridan On Georgia Ave.

By Nelson B. Bell.

One of the National Capital's most beautiful and most modernly equipped residential motion-picture theaters was formally dedicated last night, when the Sheridan, on Georgia avenue between Sheridan and Rittenhouse streets northwest, was thrown open to the public for the first time as the fifteenth unit in the Warner Brothers' circuit of local theaters.

The Sheridan reflects an entirely new treatment in decorative beauty, if not in structural design. Of the one-floor type, the house seats 1,000 people and is perfect in sight-lines and auricular effect from every seat in the auditorium. The seats, by the way, are spaced 36 inches apart, which affords ample "leg room" for every occupant and minimizes that fatal business of being crawled over in the midst of an engrossing entertainment.

The lobby is handsomely contrived and cleverly lighted, with rest rooms on both sides. Chromium bars form the barriers to lobby crowding and point the way directly into the auditorium proper of the theater which has been done in swirls of color that center in fanciful and highly artistic wall designs and ceiling lighting that is diffused by a series of vari-colored medallions of extremely effective conception.

The side walls of the Sheridan are done in a rich quality of multi-tinted satins that range in color from deep reds, greens and blues to the lighter tones of the spectrum and make of the house one of the most artistically appealing additions to the neighborhood class of theater the Capital ever has had.

The acoustics, furthermore, are perfect. There probably is not any other theater in the District that can deliver sound more efficaciously than the Sheridan. If you can't hear everything in this one, you just simply can't hear.

Every seat for last night's inaugural was sold before 6 o'clock in the afternoon. With a capacity house in attendance, Ernest H. Pullman, president of the Manor Park Citizens' Association, welcomed the new show spot as a valuable adjunct to the commercial and cultural development of the locality in which it has been erected.

Among the distinguished guests in attendance at the opening were Joseph Bernhard, vice president of Warner Brothers in charge of theater operations; John J. Payette, Washington zone manager; John Eberson, the architect; Herman Maier, Warners' chief of construction, and A. Julian Brylawski, in charge of Warner Brothers' real estate operations in the Washington territory.

The Sheridan is the third new theater to be opened by the Warner Brothers in the past year. The Penn, in Southeast Washington, opened in December, 1935, and the Uptown, on Connecticut avenue, northwest, opened last fall. There is still another one coming along.

The Calvert, being erected on Wisconsin avenue at Calvert street, will be ready for occupancy, it is believed, in the spring—probably in May.

The opening feature at the Sheridan last night was the new Warner Brothers' production of "Sing Me a Love Song," with James Melton, Patricia Ellis and Hugh Herbert in the principal roles. The bill, of course, was augmented by added short subjects and seemed quite to strike the fancy of the crowd that signalized the advent of a new entertainment institution

Three of the Theater's Most Priceless Zanies

These slightly bizarre gentlemen would be the Three Ritz Brothers, three of the most versatile comics now appearing before the public on either stage or screen. They play a leading part in creating the comedy atmosphere in "One in a Million," the amazingly diversified musical comedy coming to the screen of Loew's Capitol Theater today. Their Karloff-Laughton-Lorre number is a gem of caricature.

Film Comedian Adds Wing to Spacious Home

By the United Press.

Hollywood, Jan. 14.—Funnyman Edward Everett Horton will contribute to film colony architectural confusion by adding a banquet hall to his house, modeled after England's Hampton Court, paneled with loot from a Portland, Oreg., mansion and named for a movie hoofer.

Horton's combination, however, isn't even considered whimsical in this village, where Moorish designs, New England and Virginia colonial, mission, neo-Byzantine, modernist, California-Spanish, Midwestern cracker box, Georgian and pure birthday cake architecture stand cheek by jowl.

"Astaire Annex" is the title given the layout by Horton, because he'll pay for it with proceeds of his comedy role in "Stepping Toes," next for Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers.

The comedian will panel the interior with nine huge, carved doors, which he bought at auction recently when Portland's architecturally famous 100-year-old Corbett mansion was dismantled.

Mildly eccentric building is Horton's hobby. He has spent 11 years developing the estate he calls his "ranch" at Encino, in the San Fernando Valley, has increased his originally 10-room house to 16 rooms, and added a separate guesthouse, a little theater, kennels, warehouses and workshops.

Harpo Marx is taking a large rib for being thrown for a loss by his first mount at Santa Anita—a Shetland pony. Marx brothers went on location for their coming picture at the Arcadia track, and Harpo piled aboard the pint-sized pony for a gag. Next instant the pony piled him off—on the back of his neck. After first-aiding for strained shoulder ligaments a doctor ordered him home.

Dorothy Arzner, Hollywood's only woman director, has signed a long-term contract with M-G-M, and will direct the new Mrs. Clifford Odets, Louise Rainer, in "The Girl From Trieste," as her first Metro chore. Arzner's last was "Craig's Wife," for Columbia.

Bob Burns, Jack Oakie and Victor Moore are tentatively cast for "Radio City Revels," musical with which Jesse L. Lasky will begin his new tie-up with RKO. Burns' casting depends on whether he can be borrowed from Paramount. The studio is still dickering.

Tom Brown, 23-year-old juvenile, was aghast when told he received more leap year proposals than any other eligible male in Hollywood. On final tabulation studio fan-mail department figured the box score at 216 outright offers and 300 hints.

Contract Bridge

Suit Establishment.

South lost a well-bid slam on the hand below and every player at the table commiserated with him on the unfortunate breaks in his long suits. But he could have made his contract if he had simply taken the precaution of establishing his side suit before exhausting the trumps. The hand:

	♠ J 7 ♡ K J 8 5 ◇ A 9 8 4 3 ♣ K 7
♠ 10 9 8 3 ♡ 6 ◇ Q 10 7 2 ♣ J 10 9 5	North West East South	♠ A 8 ♡ 10 7 4 3 ◇ J 6 ♣ 8 6 4 3 2
	♠ K Q 5 4 3 ♡ A Q 9 2 ◇ K 5 ♣ A Q

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
4 N T	Pass	5 ◇	Pass
6 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

North's double raise of the heart bid was a slight overbid. South had visions of a grand slam but the four notrump convention speedily convinced him that a small slam was the limit of the combined hands. North's response of five diamonds indicated that an Ace was held by the oppenents—since North would have bid five notrump with both the Ace of diamonds and the Ace of spades. South's decision to go to six hearts in spite of the missing Ace, however, was perfectly sound in view of North's strong bidding.

West opened the Jack of clubs. South winning in his own hand with the Ace. He next cashed the Ace and King of trumps. When West discarded a club on the second trump, South drew two more rounds of trumps and started the spades with his Ace and South could not avoid a later loss to West's ten of spades.

South should have seen that it was vital to start the spades before exhausting the trumps. There was no danger if the spades broke 3-3, but a ruff was vital to provide against a 4-2 split. He should have led the Jack of spades after taking the second trump with the King. Then he could have trumped a third round of spades with dummy's Jack of hearts and would still have been able to finesse through East's ten of hearts to pick up the rest of the trumps.

It Walked in the Dark

By Agee Hays

CHAPTER 16.

Julian crossed the room, unlocked Peter's door and standing there pointed. I saw a small inside window. In fact, I had seen that window often from the back stairs. It was very high, and I've wondered casually why those back rooms would have a small high window overlooking the stairway. It let in neither light nor view.

"When the house was first made the back stairs wasn't inclosed. It went down through screened-in sleeping porches," Julian explained. "About six years ago the Brians extended the end of the house to inclose those porches; but they left the windows in the rear bedrooms. There's one in Mark's room, too. You see, anybody in the house could have crawled into this room by pulling himself up from the stair-landing down there. This key was left in the door between the two rooms. The rest was easy!"

"Why, how could the police miss a big thing like that?" I exclaimed, actually astonished.

"In a way it was Peter's fault. You see, he was head of the family and they let him roam around with them at first. Later I think they got to suspecting even him. Peter was ashamed and hurt to think he'd slept right through his father's murder. Of course, I'm only guessing this, but I've known him for years and it would be just like him. He must have though of the unlocked window and been afraid they'd trace the criminal almost over his bed while he slept . . . Well, he couldn't stand that, so he slipped the lock shut when they weren't looking. What makes me pretty sure that happened is the police were arguing about the window. One of them referred to it as unlocked and they rushed to have another look. It was locked, and Peter swore it had been all the time."

Why the Bloodhounds?

"If you saw all this, sir," I gasped, "they must not have been as strict as they were with us this time—shutting us all in one room and keeping a guard over the room."

"They weren't," Julian said quickly, looking a bit disconcerted. "Matter of fact, they sent the women and servants downstairs. They had men search the place for any prowler and didn't find any. And they told us not to leave the house. I've been thinking all this time there could have been a prowler who got away. I think that's what Peter and Mark must have suspected when they got the bloodhounds."

"But you don't think that any more, sir?"

"The police were much more thorough this time. They'd had a lesson about this place. No, this wasn't any prowler. And I'm sure the same person committed both crimes."

"That's what I heard Mr. Mark say," I agreed.

"You did?" Julian stared at me thoughtfully.

"Did the people the police sent downstairs the first time have a chance to leave the room and sneak up and go through that window?"

"Sure! The police told them to wait in that room. But I found out all of them left for a minute or two during the time—to get a drink or something."

"Didn't it seem awful queer to you, sir, that Mr. Peter could sleep like that—I mean so sound that a murderer could crawl over his bed and kill his father and crawl back even after his father had yelled loud enough to be heard all over the house?"

Given Sleeping Potion.

Julian nodded. He listened at the door of his room and opened it noiselessly to peer into the hall.

"Yes," he said in a lowered voice. "And Peter didn't act natural for a while after they got him up. Of course, the police didn't know him, so they wouldn't notice that and the rest of the family were too excited to think of it. But—I can't prove this, either, understand?—I just think somebody gave him a sleeping powder."

"After he went to bed?"

"No. Just before."

"But how could they?"

"Well, that night we all had a mint julep before we went to bed. Mark mixed them. He always did. And he left them in the kitchen. Then Lee brought them in on a tray. But Peter didn't have his when we did. He'd gone to lodge. I heard Mark tell Lee he had left Peter's on the corner of the table and to give it to him when he came in."

"You don't think Mr. Mark——" I began.

Julian shugged. "I did at first—and he may have. But I don't know. You see, the men most always had some kind of refreshment before they retired, so anybody who had watched could have caught on and planned the powder. Cora and Lee were around it and anybody could have stepped into the kitchen between the time it was mixed and the time Peter got it."

"Why didn't you tell the police this, sir?" I couldn't refrain from asking.

Julian was leaning against the wall absenlly fingering the small bald spot at the top of his head. His eyes narrowed and he leaned forward speaking intently. "For two or three reasons. One was that we were all under suspicion and if a suspect who can't prove anything starts being too helpful with theories he can't prove, he's convicting himself. You see, if they started to trace that mint julep, they'd have found I gave it to Peter myself." Julian's one-sided smile showed faintly.

"You see," he went on, "Lee was tired and I told him to go on to bed. I was reading. When Peter came, I went out to the kichen and got his julep. He drank it in the library. Right after that he got up and went to bed. I followed only a few minutes later and took a bath."

Double Spying.

I sat there looking at that lean sardonic face and trying to read something in it. Why was Julian telling me all this? To mislead me? But it sounded plausible. Almost as if he guessed my thoughts, he explained.

"You have a right to hear my side after you've given me so many valuable clues tonight. They may help more than I know, when I've juggled them into some order."

I'm glad if I can help, sir," I answered humbly.

"You keep on listening in on the police, the servants' talk—everything. Keep your eyes open, too!" I promised.

"With all you've told me, I'm sure if we work together we ought to get somewhere. You see, we've got to get something pretty tangible before we can go to the police with it."

"You know, I been thinking, sir . . . Why would a murderer sneak back to a room when there's a policeman just outside the door and turn a dead body over? Don't seem reasonable."

Julian nodded. "That was a daring thing, on my word! Whoever it was ran a terrible chance! The funny part was, as I've thought of it since, everybody had a chance to sneak down the hall and scale that place in the dark and turn Mr. Brian's body over—everybody but Cora."

"Cora?"

"Yes. She was the last questioned. And I don't recall that she left the room until they called for her. They'd found the body turned over before then."

"Why would any one do it, sir?" I persisted.

"One of two reasons—as I see it. All along somebody's trying to make us think a ghost is doing these things. You see, turning a corpse over in that way was ghostly . . . Or—now, this is more likely: The murderer fled so quickly he left something behind. Maybe something that would incriminate him. He hurried back, looked under the body, recovered what he had left, and, without taking time to turn the body back, dashed off again."

We'd been talking in low tones, but as Julian went into the last theory his voice had risen somewhat with excitement. Now he began to pace the floor.

"Why do you suppose Miss Hunt was sobbing the other night?" I asked him after telling him Jean had said she had overheard Miss Hunt. (I knew he wouldn't bother to ask Jean. He never saw her.) "Then that sort of pleading I heard her do on the telephone?"

What Police Overlooked.

Julian paused thoughtfully. "Those things might mean something—or not. She and Mark might be having a lovers' quarrel. I know they had some words that day before he went to the office . . . I wonder . . . if that could have been over Peter? . . . You see," he explained, "I've really had a better chance all along to unravel this than the police have, because I know the habits of everybody here—and all that. And I've seen the police time after time overlook bets . . . Now, for instance," he halted near me and it seemed to me he listened cautiously before whispering, "The other night they overlooked what I believe is going to be the greatest means of finding the murderer."

Something in Julian's face scared me. I don't know what. Maybe it was the tenseness which held his blue eyes so glassily in that skullish forehead. Maybe it was the tiny curl of triumph on his heavy lips. Anyway, I leaned forward and whispered, "What was it they overlooked, sir?"

He lowered his voice to a thin murmur. "This last murder. There was a living witness to that. He was in the room when the police unlocked the door. They didn't pay any attention."

$134,370 Low Bid On Skyline Link

Chandler Brothers, Inc., of Virgilina, Va., submitted the lowest of 12 bids yesterday for construction of the section of Skyline Drive, in Shenandoah National Park, Va., from Browns Gap south to Black Rock, according to the Associated Press.

Its bid was $134,370 on specifications calling for use of cast-iron pipe culverts and $132,600 for reinforced concrete pipe.

Ralph E. Mills Co., Frankfort, Ky., was second low bidder with figures $145,711.50 and $146,536.40; and E. C. Branham Construction Co., Burkeville, Va., third with $150,072.50 and $148,372.50.

The bids, originally expected to be called for last fall, were delayed by modification of serveys by the Bureau of Public Roads to avoid destruction of old Confederate trenches located on the original survey route.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Yesterday was a day of entertaining at the Italian Embassy. The Ambassador and Donna Matilde de Suvich were hosts at luncheon in compliment to Dr. Domenic Vittorini, of the University of Pennsylvania, who last evening addressed the Italy-America Society, and later in the afternoon received hundreds of guests at a reception from 5 to 7.

Even the spacious rooms of the embassy were crowded. It seemed as though all Washington society had assembled for the occasion, the first large function given at the embassy since the arrival of the new Italian envoy and his wife.

They received in the drawing room adjoining the large hall with its high marble columns and its marble stairway, carpeted in red. Donna Matilde de Suvich wore a simple gown of black crepe with which her fair hair was in artistic contrast.

The walls of the room were covered in an olive green brocade, matching that with which the gold chairs and sofas were upholstered. Handsome oil paintings and the tones in the rugs gave warmth of color.

Cocktails were served in a smaller salon adjoining. Between that and the banquet room, where the buffet table was set, was a salon of equal size with the drawing room, where long divans and chairs offered invitation to sit and chat with friends. In this large room the hangings and coverings were all of deep rose brocade.

Lady Lindsay, wife of the British Ambassador, sat there holding a court of her own, greeting one friend after another who stopped for a word with her. Beside her stood Mrs. Heywood, wife of the commercial secretary of the British Embassy, and Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin was one of those who sat for a few moments of conversation with her. Lady Lindsay wore a becoming brown suit and hat, with a blouse embroidered in colored design.

Nearby were the Minister of Czechoslovakia and Mme. Hurban in conversation with Mrs. F. Wilkinson Bunker, who soon is to be wed to the former Italian Ambassador, Signor Augusto Rosso. Both were in black, Mme. Hurban's frock trimmed with a braided band of white around the stand-up collar and down the front, and Mrs. Bunker's blouse trimmed in a band of gold.

Across the room were the Ambassador of Turkey and Mme. Ertegun, accompanied by their young guest, Miss Marjorie Duncan, of London. Mme. Saito, wearing a black frock with gold threads through it, was accompanied by Mme. Yoshizawa, in blue with touches of red, and Mme. Hayama. Miss Willa Magee, of the Canadian Legation, was wearing a dress of olive green and a small black hat; Miss Dorothy Tirrell was in a rust-colored costume, both hat and frock trimmed in mink. The Minister of the Union of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph William Close were among the early arrivals.

Mrs. Louis Caldwell, who was accompanied by her brother, Mr. Alfred Neuffer, of California, was congratulating herself on having discarded a winter coat for a spring suit, and was one of the few who did not find the day uncomfortably warm.

The Minister of Egypt, Mr. Mohamed Amine Youssef, and the Charge d'Affaires of the Legation, Mr. Anis Azer, were there. Their legation will be the scene of a party on February 11 in celebration of the birthday anniversary of their young ruler.

The younger set was well represented in the green and gold banquet room. In a little group of their own were the three pretty Trucco sisters, Senorita Marta, Senorita Rebeca and Senorita Graciela, daughters of the Chilean Minister, enor Don Manuel Trucco; with them were Senorita Olga Patterson, Mr. Ernest Schlatter and Mr. Joao de Deus Ramos. Nearby were Mlle. Nora de With, in beige and brown; Mr. Nathan Bartlett, Mr. Ditlef Knudsen, of the Norwegian Legation; Miss Diana Rowland, in black with an off-the-face hat; Senorita Eleanor Campbell, in twilight blue moire crepe, and Mr. Morris Evans, jr.

The Acting Postmaster General and Mrs. W. W. Howes, the latter in black, were accompanied by their daughter, Miss Mary Senate Howes, who was wearing a gay spring print, and Mr. John Stuart.

Others seen enjoying the refreshment were the Attache of the Egyptian Legation and Mme. Zoulfikar, the latter completing her black ensemble with an unusual hat of orchid felt fashioned off the face and forming a butterfly in the front; the Air Attache of the Chilean Embassy and Mme. Puga, who was in vivid green, trimmed with a gold design around the neck and cuffs; Mrs. Parker West, in black crepe with a short cape of black galyak; Mrs. Sol Bloom and Miss Vera Bloom; Mrs. Ednass Wilkins in gray, trimmed at the throat and hem with bands of chinchilla; Capt. Louis Sable, of the French Embassy; the Counselor of the Soviet Embassy and Mme. Oumansky, the latter in Eleanor blue with a halo hat of black velvet, and with them the Second Secretary of the Embassy and Mme. Gokhman and Mr. and Mme. Gregory Grigoriev, the Counselor of the Cuban Embassy and Senora de Baron.

In the central salon were Mrs. Homer Cummings, wife of the Attorney General, who was dressed in black satin made on long tailored lines and with a fitted jacket, and she wore a small black felt hat with an interesting bow effect in the front; Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, also in black, with a touch of turquoise blue; Senor Carlos Blanco, of the Cuban Embassy; Mrs. George Barnett; the Minister of Uruguay, Mr. Jose Richling; the Minister of Yugoslavia, Mr. Constantin Fotitch, and his First Secretary and Mme. Perazic, the latter in bronze lame; Mrs. Fred A. Britten, in brown; Mme. Boncesco, wife of the Financial Counselor of the Rumanian Legation; the Assistant Financial Counselor of the Rumanian Legation and Mme. Dimitriu, she in black, her small bonnet-hat of felt trimmed across the front with a braided band of patent leather ribbon; the Minister of Portugal and Mme. Bianchi, the latter in rust with a short sable cape, and her daughter, Miss Sibilla Skidelsky, in black woolen broadcloth trimmed with Persian lamb; Mrs. Emil Hurja; Senor Don Hector Leguizamon; the Counselor of the Polish Embassy and Mme. Wankowicz.

With them were Senora de Quintanilla, wife of the Counselor of the Embassy, and her sister-in-law, Senorita Lutecia Quintanilla; the Third Secretary of the Embassy and Senora de Garduno; Senorita Maria Elena Pombo and Dr. Don Manuel Gonzalez.

THE MERRY WHIRL by MARYLYN

Yesterday there was a surprise birthday party at the Admiral Club. It was not all a surprise, because Mrs. Roosevelt, the guest of honor, knew the Newspaper Women's Club had planned a luncheon for her. The unexpected part was the observance of the first anniversary of her column, My Day. (It really had its birthday on the sixth, but with so many official affairs going on then it was not possible to celebrate any sooner.)

The U-shaped table was decorated in "black and white," symbols of the newspaper. There were tall ebony tapers in crystal holders and miniature white birthday candles standing in black gumdrops with handles made of white lifesavers, which were the placemarkers.

The First Lady was wearing a gown of mulberry crepe, made with a high neck and full at the shoulders. On her black velvet brimmed hat there was a tiny diamond Democratic donkey. Upon her arrival she was presented with an unusual corsage of flame-colored camellias and delicate smaller flowers. The bouquet had been brought all the way from Portsmouth, Va., by Lelia Triplett, a fellow scribe of Mrs. Roosevelt.

From the Cabinet were Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, who was in black, with a silver fox scarf, and a bow of violet velvet on her tall-crowned hat, and Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, in raspberry crepe and a fetching little black hat. Both had recovered remarkably from their "at homes" the day before.

Among the 45 present, the associate members included Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, whose gown of black satin was brocaded with tiny figures of silver and green hindu dancers, with fans. With this the wearer was using a fan. Other associate members were Commissioner Lucille Foster McMillin; Mrs. E. A. Harriman, wearing golden brown; Mrs. Emil Hurja, in black with a narrow collar of black Persian lamb; Mrs. Arthur Mullen, Mrs. Charles M. Lea, Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie and Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin.

Louise Myers has more than her share of talents, methinks. Of late, she and Mary Bradley have been turning their efforts and leisure time to art. Under the interested eye of William Girvan, technical director for "It Can't Happen Here," which will be given at the Wardman Park Theater, Louise and Mary have been painting colorful and original plaques. They will add much to the scene, occupying the curtain, alcoves and corners.

Other guests will include Maj. and Mrs. Henry Leonard, Mrs. William Vaughn, Capt. and Mrs. Harry Stadler, who are leaving soon for their new station in the Philippines, and Capt. Hayden Boatner.

Emblems of Vanity

WHAT Everywoman Knows: That her hat is the most important single item in her wardrobe. She demands that it "does things" for her, to her. She chooses it for downright flattery, for challenge, for its subtle underscoring of her best features.

Women have more convictions—and, paradoxically — fewer prejudices about hats than about other articles of wearing apparel. Concerning millinery, Everywoman is an Eternal Experimenter, ever ready—ever searching—to find a new frame for her person, her personality.

A new hat is like an exciting seasoning to a jaded palate . . . it is a midseason fillip to a familiar costume . . . a veritable "new lease on life."

A Woman's NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Jan. 14.

STRANGE though it may seem, there is always something in the showy parts of this place that puzzles me profoundly, and further furrows a brow that already resembles a relief map of Colorado. Occasionally it is some inanimate trifle, like the reason for jingle-bells on a bolero jacket, or why girls ski, but usually it is about people. Right now I am fretting myself into a decline over the reason for the truly colossal public attention that is showered upon Miss Libby Holman every time she pokes her sables outside her door.

ALICE HUGHES.

True, there was the terrible tragedy that ended her marriage with the young Mr. Reynolds of the South Carolina Reynoldses. True, again, that she possesses a small son who will one day stagger under the load of either nursing or spending 7,000,000 American dollars. Yet Libby is no prettier than when she was a roly-poly young torch singer from Ohio winning her first acclaim with "Moanin' Low." And while she owns and sports some very elegant clothes indeed, they are no costlier or lovelier than those paraded by scores of other New York women. Yet you ought to see the riot that explodes every time she bursts upon a first night lobby or a night club!

I can't explain it, but there it is! Hundreds of crawling little autograph fiends desert other wondrous "celebrities," beautiful or rich or famous, and practically tear good old Lib limb from limb. She climaxed her fall triumphs as a public spectacle by absolutely stealing the Metropolitan Opera opening from the social hot shots, who entered the place unnoticed while hundreds of cameramen snapped Holman from all angles!

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—I did my best for the customers by trying to get the opulent Mrs. Joseph E. Davies to say something just before she sailed away for Moscow not long ago, but her lips, to coin a phrase, were sealed. She wouldn't even say she had nothing to say, which is a new high for reticence this season. At least her husband, the Ambassador, said that much. But Marjorie looked very handsome, there on the Europa, and I thought what a treat the benighted Muscovites were in for!

• • • •

If there had been a band on the job at the Ritz the other noon it would have burst into "Carmen" music. The lunching toffs dropped their forks as Mrs. Frederick T. Ley, jr., arrived wearing a toreador hat, half red and half black, which perched on a Spanish scarf tied over her head. Nobody asked which faction she belonged to, so she probably just represented "The Spirit of Old Spain."

• • • •

I suppose you are as surprised as I to learn of the recent death of Lottie Blair Parker, who wrote "Way Down East." I always felt that that old tear-jerker practically dated from Shakespeare's time—yet out here on Long Island that little old lady lived to the age of 78, in complete retirement, and only passed on the other day. And to think that she sold that millions-making show outright! On a royalty basis she'd have become an enormously rich woman.

• • • •

Every year produces some pat phrase or catch line, usually from a hit show, that sweeps the cocktail lounges until the very sound of it makes you icky. Right now the girls are saying "I'm positively livid!" because Auntie Bea Lillie uses it in a sketch in "The Show Is On." I'm positively livid already from hearing it so much!

• • • •

A great cosmetician here pulls me into a crowded corner and confides in a roaring whisper that for the hot raging sun of Southern beaches there's nothing quite so dandy as face creams made with a coconut-milk base. In fact, says he, he has ordered a ton of the stuff to whip up into his face-daub. The milk of the coconut is said to have a slight bleaching quality, guards the skin with a thin veil and acts as a swell softener. At that, I don't suppose a cream made with coconut milk can actually hurt anybody's face!

Sees Character in Modern Woman's Face

Widely known for her child portraits, Miss Edith McCartney, Washington artist has only within the last two years been painting women. Up to that time her subjects were children and men exclusively. She finds most of interest in the face of the modern woman of achievement. Vain women she does not like to paint. She makes eyes the focal point of the character and personality of a subject.

By Vylla Poe Wilson.

THE MODERN WOMAN has much in her face to please the artist who likes to depict character and personality rather than to make mere photographic likenesses. Miss Edith McCartney, Washington pastel artist, made this assertion as she paused to contemplate the woman's portrait she had just completed.

Up to two years ago, Miss McCartney painted only children and men and won her recognition in the art world in that way.

"Yes, I like to paint women now," Miss McCartney acknowledged smilingly. "But I held off until two years ago. I have found women very interesting to paint, especially women of achievement. I do not like to paint vain women, because they expect me to compromise and not paint their personalities and characters, as I see them."

Urges Art as Panacea.

Miss McCartney urged a more universal study of art as a panacea for the restlessness of women of leisure as well as a means of recreation and relaxation for women of achievement.

The bright-eyed little artist believes that such a study would give the modern woman a new viewpoint on life. She thinks it would furnish a welcome alternative to bridge games and kindred activities which, she says, are well enough in their places, but can be overdone.

"Above all," Miss McCartney declared, "such a study would enhance the appreciation of art among women and this, of course, would have a direct effect on the art perspective of the Nation, in our homes and in our everyday life."

A Pet Theory.

"It is a pet theory of mine," she added, "to urge every woman who can do so to join an art study group. Often those who think they cannot draw and have no artistic ability are surprised at what they can do and what enjoyment they can derive from their efforts and the development of the ability to enjoy artistic things.

"The strides that women artists are making is a source of great satisfaction to every one interested in art," Miss McCartney asserted. "They have overcome much of the prejudice that centers about women in the profession. However, there never has been as much prejudice in art on account of sex as existed in other professions. This country has a number of women portrait painters who equal men painters and are accorded equal recognition in the world of art.

"Women have the perspective, understanding, patience and habits of industry that go to make up success in the pursuit of an art career. They never seem to know when to stop. They are apt to carry on their work without letting outside things pull them away. They do respond to the tug of duty, however, especially when this is represented in their children and their homes. Men are more creatures of habit and more apt to stop for meals or to engage in some other pursuit that interests them."

In her desire to paint the characters and personalities of her subjects Miss McCartney spends as much time finding out what kind of persons they are, their tastes and their enjoyments in life as she does in studying their physical features. She sometimes plays with children for an hour or two before she makes a single stroke on her canvas.

Her technique is rather revolutionary. While she works entirely in pastels, the most difficult art medium, she usually does her work on canvas instead of pastel paper. She begins with the eyes. With these as the focal point she draws the character and personality of the subject, getting the likeness by the expression of the mouth and turn of the head more than from perfection of line and contour. It is easy enough to get a likeness, is her theory, but she wants more than that.

"I am always pleased," she said, "when people who look through my portfolios can tell me what kind of people I have drawn and even sometimes name their professions."

Should Be Psychologist.

In discussing the painting of children, especially her pastels of Eleanor and Curtis Dall, grandchildren of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, made at the White House last year, Miss McCartney asserted that the artist who paints children must be something of a child psychologist. The first thing necessary is to gain the friendship of the child and to arouse its interest in the portrait just as in a game. The pastel is the ideal medium, Miss McCartney thinks, for getting the delicate coloring and texture of the skin in portraits, especially those of children.

The field of pastel painting has been explored only in part, she says. She expresses satisfaction that some of the prejudice against pastels in this country has been eliminated. The chief source of the prejudice has been the theory that pastels can only be sketchy and weak, but Miss McCartney has proved by her work that they can have strength, freshness and great brilliancy of color.

Among the best works of Miss McCartney are her black and white sketches of men. These are Rembrandt-like in their treatment of light and shadow. Miss McCartney likened her men subjects to her child subjects in that men always want to get the sittings over as quickly as possible.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

The older idea that gout is confined to pleasure-loving gourmands has, in the light of modern research, given way to the concept that it can affect persons of all ages and types. Physicians now say that the disease is either more prevalent than it was a generation or two ago, or that today it is more accurately diagnosed.

Uric acid is, of course, the culprit, but it will not be formed unless we supply the foods from which it can be manufactured. Chief among these is sweetbreads. Another important source is yeast, and no gouty individual should use yeast as a remedy for constipation or other intestinal disorder. But thousands of people will consume sweetbreads and yeast without the slightest untoward effect.

The gout picture is one that is easily recognized. The first symptom of significance is a sensation of numbness in muscles with some discomfort in joints. Just why the acute attack comes at night has never been explained. A sudden severe pain manifests itself in one or more joints, sometimes accompanied by chills and fever. The area becomes red and swollen and the victim may perspire profusely.

If the victim is otherwise in good health, symptoms will abate, usually within a week or two. If on the other hand he is weakened and presents a low resistance, distress may persist for a month or more. Sooner or later the pain disappears completely, but the end is not yet, because within a year or even a few months the condition will recur with the same cycle of events.

Treatment consists of rest in bed, hot applications of a saturated solution of epsom salts, the use of the drug colchicum as may be prescribed by the physician, and a liquid diet free from the inciting foods—tea, coffee and all caffein-containing beverages; meat, including fish, fowl and glandular organs; brown bread, peas.

Vocal Training Should Start In Early Youth

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

MRS. Y. was a handsome woman. She was tall, with a good figure, and the presence which comes from a consciousness of good looks.

People instinctively trusted her judgment and good sense until they heard her speak. Then they wavered, for out of this grown woman came the voice, undeveloped and lacking in resonance, of a little child.

Why parents in overseeing their children's development are so apt to forget the voice is a mystery. If a child's other organs ceased to mature at five or six, they would consult a physician, or at least be worried about the matter. But not so when the voice suddenly stops growing. Many mature women, in fact, pride themselves on baby voices.

Generally a childish voice argues some immaturity along other lines, though not always. Many women would give a great deal for round and pleasant voices, but in maturity are unable to achieve them. They should have been trained in childhood.

Voices can be trained, like arms and legs. Everyone knows this about the singing voice, but few know it, or see the need for it, in a speaking voice. There are exercises to train vocal cords, to develop the right tones, place the voice and improve its quality.

Parents can do much to help the child along these lines, but only if they first know what a good speaking voice is, and then enlist the child's interest in acquiring it.

Sometimes it is not a bad plan to have a record made of the child's voice and let him hear himself speak. It is not expensive to do, and will probably more than pay for itself in the end by its effect on the child. It is hard to hear one's own voice as others hear it.

New Wallpapers Can Be Washed

Wallpaper has invaded the kitchen, the bathroom, and even the children's playroom.

Once it was considered impractical for these rooms. But the waterproof and washable varieties to be had these days can be used without misgivings to adorn the entire house.

Some washable wallpapers must be handled with care. Ordinary soil and loose dirt can be readily washed away, but the paper must be gone over gently with a soft, soapy sponge. Other hardy varieties withstand the removal of practically every kind of spot from inky fingerprints to splashes of soup.

Make a heavy suds and apply it with a sponge or soft cloth. Wash a small portion at a time. Rinse immediately with the sponge or a cloth wrung out of clear water.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: One year ago I married a girl whom I had known only nine months. During our courtship days we were very happy, as we had mutual tastes and enjoyed being together wherever we went. We attended many dances, swimming parties, and shows; we visited friends and never for a minute questioned our love for each other.

• • • •

Then, several months after our marriage, my wife began to act cold and indifferent toward me. The things we had formerly enjoyed together no longer seemed to interest her. She severed all connections with old friends, until now she hasn't a friend in the world.

• • • •

At first I thought she had an attack of the "blues," which would pass, but this thing has kept up for nearly a year now. Things have gone from bad to worse. I am steadily employed by a local firm as a solicitor, and earn an average salary for this type of work. My wife is not employed outside the home.

• • • •

When I get home from a hard day's work and ask for dinner, my wife points to a can of soup and a can opener. I take it on the chin and prepare my evening "meal." The remainder of the evening she sits and sulks. I try to make conversation by describing the events of the day, as I come in contact with all kinds of persons and situations in the course of my work, and have many interesting experiences to relate. But my efforts meet with no response from her. After a couple of hours of this, we retire for the night, seldom later than 9 o'clock.

• • • •

I am thinking of leaving her. Am I wise in choosing this course? Or is there some other way out? She is 22 and I am 24. Hoping you can straighten us out, I am, sincerely yours, BEWILDERED.

A Sick Woman.

DEAR BEWILDERED: It must be that your wife is ill; perhaps not actually physically ill, but ailing in the psychic realm of the nerves and the emotions. There can be no other explanation for that pronounced apathy which has impelled her to drop all her old friends, ignore her husband and neglect her primary duties as a housewife. Inhibitions which stand in the way of her making a wholesome, normal adjustment to the marital relationship may be at the core of her strange attitude. If the situation cannot be corrected, I suppose the only thing to do is to separate.

• • • •

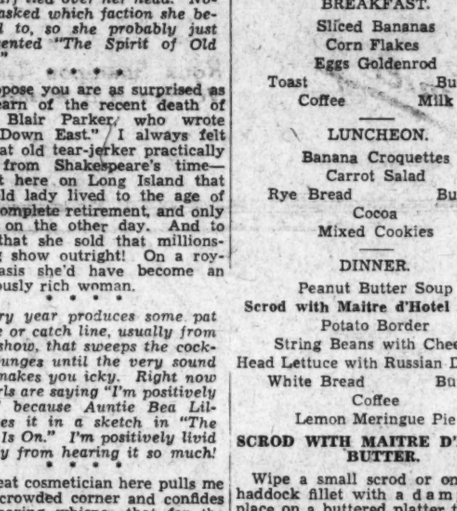

Tell her how you feel about your marriage as it stands, and ask her to co-operate with you in finding the best way out of the present difficulty. You might suggest that she see a doctor, and if she refuses, talk to a doctor yourself. You might get helpful advice from the Washington Life Adjustment Center, 1464 Columbia road, telephone ADams 1033. The director, Miss Beulah Smith, will be glad to talk with you and arrange an appointment with a psychiatrist, if your wife's problem seems to her to require psychiatric investigation and control.

• • • •

One could not reasonably expect a husband to continue indefinitely and acquiescently in such a partnership as this, but on the other hand, he should not, in justice to his moral responsibility to his wife, desert her under such conditions as these without first having made every human effort to discover and correct the underlying difficulty. Her morbid behavior is a symptom of some deep-rooted misery within herself. It is entirely possible that with diligent effort you may guide her back to normalcy and achieve for both of you a richer happiness than you knew in your courtship days.

By Alice Brooks.

CROCHET an afghan in the gayest colors you can think of! Grandmother knew all the "tricks" for solid comfort, and this modern "heirloom" is as fluffy, cheerful and warm as any she ever possessed! The stitch forming the daisy-like chaine is quickly learned. The contrasting stripes are lovely in three shades of one color, or with a different color used for each. Choose Germantown wool for its softness. In pattern 5772 you will find directions for making the afghan; an illustration of it and of the stitches used; material requirements, and color suggestions.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Washington Post, Household Arts Dept., 259 West Fourteenth street, New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

The Federal Diary

By Samuel Lubell.

Horses

Foggy, soggy days have a way of making us think of the machine age and inevitably we wind up making a survey of some form of resistance to time's marching on. Yesterday it was horses.

There are just three left in Government harness in the city, excluding, of course, Fort Myer Cavalry. The Department of Agriculture and National Park Service own one apiece, while the Park Service rents another for $34.50 a month, stable and board included.

The rented horse—we couldn't get the name—is used by Park Policeman Leslie D. Mason, the only mounted cop in Washington. Mason picks the horse up every morning at the stable and returns it at dusk. The other Park Service horse is a small, black mare who, despite her sex, is named Marshal Joffre, and is used for maintenance work on the bridal paths in Rock Creek Park.

Joffre—no one calls her Marshal anymore—has spent about 6 of her 11 years with the Park Service. She was bought in Baltimore for $50 at the time the Park Service had half a dozen or more retired firehorses, who regarded Joffre as somewhat of a freak because she would never snort or stamp her heels when sirens blew or bells clanged. But Joffre is still on the scene while her erstwhile companions have been gone three or four years—let that be a lesso nto retired firehorses.

The Department of Agriculture horse is a big, black 16-year-old Persian, named Willis. Why, no one could say. Hitched to a cart, Willis draws soils and things around areas of the greenhouses that cannot be reached by automobiles.

Those recent air crashes will intensify the efforts of some legislators and airline industrialists to have the Interstate Commerce Commission take over the Bureau of Air Commerce's function of regulating the air ways.

Cafeteria Rules

Farm Credit employes seem completely captivated by the charms of their new lunchroom—so much so that administrators have posted a new set of rules to keep employes from cafeteria-wooing at all hours of the working day.

Henceforth, no food is to be served between 8:15 and 11:30 a. m., nor after 1:30 p. m. during week days; while on Saturdays eating will be verboten between 8:15 and 12:30. Breakfasters have to leave before 8:30, and noontimers not late than 1:45. Cigars, cigarettes, candy, gum and soft drinks will be sold during the day, provided gum-chewers, etc., leave the lunchroom promptly.

Farm Credit officials seem to think of everything—since the building will command such a splendid view of the Inaugural parade employes have been cautioned to hide valuables and watch their hats and coats (while not eating).

Removing Wallpaper

Scientists, we are about convinced, still have a subconscious yearning for perpetual motion; certainly no sooner is one thing invented than a host of counter-acting devices — maybe counter-irritants would be more appropriate—are invented. Several years ago, for example, washable wallpaper was science's latest boon to mankind, and now comes Martin Leatherman, of the Department of Agriculture, with a process for removing this wallpaper.

The reason a new process was needed, we hasten to explain, is that the customary way of removing wallpaper is to wet it thoroughly and then start scraping. Obviously it's pretty difficult to get waterproof wallpaper sufficiently wet to facilitate scraping. Leatherman, however, has patented a jelly-like solution, consisting of nine parts water and one part dentonite, a rather forceful mineral, which will soak through and loosen any paper that has been pasted up, even if the wallpaper is three or four coatings thick. Leatherman used his mixture—he calls it "gel"—in his own home—and greater faith hath no man.

Take it from an old microfilm devotee, those cameras installed this week by the Bureau of Census are the very las tword in microfilm equipment. The cameras have two features that none of Uncle Sam's other microfilm cameras have—a lens control that reflects light on precisely that section of the page that is to be filmed, and a special panchromatic film that takes color photos.

Five in Senate Are Named To D. C. Unit

House May Complete Its Sub-Committee During Today.

By James D. Secrest.

Five new members were appointed on the Senate District appropriations sub-committee yesterday as Chairman Buchanan, of the House Appropriations Committee, prepared to draft a chairman for the corresponding House sub-committee.

The new Senate appointees include four Democrats and one Republican, and the ratio is changed from 6 to 3 to 8 to 2. The Democratic additions are Senators Burke, of Nebraska; Duffy, of Wisconsin; Hitchcock, of South Dakota, and Green, of Rhode Island.

The new minority member is Senator Bridges, of New Hampshire, who also was added to the Senate District Committee earlier in the week.

Senator Thomas, of Oklahoma, retains the chairmanship of the District sub-committee, and others who remain are Senators Glass, of Virginia; Copeland, of New York; Overton, of Louisiana, and Nye (Republican), of North Dakota.

The three ex-officio members from the Senate District Committee, who are permitted to sit with the District sub-committee but not vote, are the same as last year: Senators King, of Utah; Tydings, of Maryland, and Capper, of Kansas.

May Draft Collins.

Reports were current meanwhile that Representative Ross Collins, of Mississippi, a former member of the House sub-committee on District appropriations, will be drafted for the job of chairman and that Representative Ditter (Republican), of Pennsylvania, will be replaced, possibly by Representative Carter, of California, as the sole minority member, Buchanan said that nothing will be announced until all members are assigned, probably today.

Indications are that the other vacancies on the District sub-committee may be filled by newcomers to Congress. One of the members who has been asked to take a job is Representative Caldwell, of Florida.

House Slate Completed.

The House District Committee slate was completed yesterday with the appointment of two Republican members. One fills a vacancy, while the other replaces Representative Reed, of Illinois, who was advanced to the Judiciary Committee.

The new members are Representatives Bates, who is also mayor of Salem, Mass., and Shafer, of Michigan.

Republicans reappointed to the committee are Representatives Dirksen, of Illinois; Short, of Missouri; Brewster, of Maine, and Cole, of New York.

Chairman Norton stated that she probably will call an organization meeting for Tuesday instead of Monday, as previously announced; because the House adjournment until next week will lead many members to go home over the weekend.

HOLC Promise Aired as Sisters Fight Home Loss

Testimony in the attempt of the Colt sisters, Miss Katherine G. and Miss Alice E. Colt, to have the Montgomery County Circuit Court set aside the sale of their home on West Kirke street, Chevy Chase, Md., on mortgage foreclosure proceedings by the Home Owners Loan Corporation was taken yesterday before Judge Thomas M. Anderson, examiner for the court.

Miss Katherine Colt testified for the sisters, who admitted they had given a mortgage to HOLC, together with their mother, Mrs. Susie G. Colt, now dead. She declared that the HOLC had been informed that the sisters had no means of making the payments unless they took in paying guests. She testified the HOLC failed to make a promised modernization loan and later foreclosed on their home before the time legally allowed and without notifying the sisters as required by law.

The property was sold under the hammer for $9,000, which she contended was not a fair price, since the mortgage was for $19,066.30, and the property had not depreciated in value since.

Miss Colt contended that the HOLC had agreed to waive all payments for three years, or until about of foreclosure could not be held November 2, 1936, and that a sale until 90 days from that time. The sale was held October 5, 1936.

William H. DeLacy, who was attorney for the Colt sisters at the time the mortgage was given, testified that the latter statement was true. The Misses Colt were represented by Attorney Charles M. Irelan and the Home Owners by Attorney Donald Bowie, jr. Testimony for the HOLC will be presented next week.

Pet Poisoner Again Stalks Canines of Shepherd Park

Nellie, a Terrier of John T. Moss, Jr., 8, Survives Dose in Answer to His Prayers; Miss Wassman's Belgian Shepherd Is Killed.

The prayers of John T. Moss, jr., freckle-faced 8-year-old who lives at 1300 Jonquil street northwest, were answered yesterday. His dog, Nellie, will live.

Nellie, a black-and-tan terrier, was poisoned Wednesday. She was the second victim of a new dog-poisoning outbreak in the Shepherd Park section.

Several dogs owned by residents of the area were killed last spring. Veterinarians said they had been poisoned.

The first dog to be killed in the recurrence of the poisoning was Princess Ritter, 9-year-old Belgian shepherd, owned by Miss Dorothea Wassman, of 7804 Morningside drive northwest. Princess Ritter died Tuesday.

Nellie's life was saved through the prompt action of her mistress, Mrs. John T. Moss, mother of the boy, who prayed that his dog might live.

Summoned by her son, Mrs. Moss found Nellie lying on the sidewalk. She called her and the dog, even then close to death, got to her feet and staggered to the Moss doorstep. There the dog collapsed.

Nellie was rushed to Dr. E. E. Ruebush, by Mrs. Moss and D. B. Sober, jr., of 1329 Jonquil street northwest. Dr. Ruebush saying that Nellie had been poisoned, applied immediate treatment, but it was not known until yesterday that the dog would live.

During that time 8-year-old John T. remained in an agony of fear. He prayed that Nellie, who went to school with him every day and who played catch with a rubber ball, would get well.

Both dogs, like those who were poisoned last spring, were quiet, gentle and the constant comrades of the neighborhood children. None of the residents in the section know who would be unfeeling enough to make such a wholesale distribution of poison.

Experts to Help District Study Of Tax Problem

A conference of "experts" soon will be called to discuss District tax questions and seek solution to the problem of raising additional local revenue through scheduled tax increases, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen announced yesterday.

Revealing he had instructed District Auditor Daniel J. Donovan to brief the Jacobs fiscal relations report for a more efficient study by local officials, Commissioner Hazen said he would wait until after the Inauguration before setting a date for the conference with "experts."

"As soon as we can get any idea of how much more we will need to balance the budget," he said, "we will call in experts such as Robert V. Fleming and Edward F. Colladay to help us decide how to raise it.

"There is nothing effective we can do just now," Hazen continued. "We know that we will have to have more revenue from taxes, but we don't know how much. If there is to be a budget deficit of $10,000,000 and Congress is to give us $5,000,000 as a Federal contribution, then we will know how much additional money we have to provide for."

Fleming, president of the Riggs National Bank, and Colladay, prominent local attorney and Republican national committeeman for the District, were considered by Hazen as the most able and logical men to aid in solving the complex District financial problem.

City and department heads have refused repeatedly to discuss the Jacobs report and 1938 budge tpending the scheduled conference.

Maj. Weaver Made District Engineer

Maj. Tharon DeWitt Weaver, of the United States Army Engineer Corps, has been appointed district engineer for the Washington area, the War Department announced yesterday.

Maj. Weaver was on duty here from 1933 to 1935, when he attended the Army War College.

A native of Detroit, Mich., Maj. Weaver graduated from the University of Michigan in 1916 with a Bachelor of Science degree in electrical engineering. He went into the Engineer Corps when the United States entered the World War. He was promoted to captain in 1919, and in August, 1935, to major.

Maj. Weaver, who is 44 years old, married Catherine Morland MacNaughton, of Calumet, Mich., in 1921. He is a member of the Army-Navy Club here.

Goldstein Quits U. S. Legal Post

Irvin Goldstein, for many years one of the ace prosecutors on the staffs of United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett and former United States Attorney Leo A. Rover, today will resign as an assistant United States Attorney. He plans to enter the private practice.

Goldstein has been identified with District Court for many years. He first was a clerk in the district attorney's office and later on was secretary to Justice Peyton Gordon. He is a graduate of Georgetown.

The vacancy will be filled by the promotion of Albert Goldstein, a brother, who now is a clerk in the Police Court branch of the United States Attorney's office.

Sixth Traffic Death of Year Is Registered

An aged man, struck by an automobile November 22, died in Georgetown Hospital yesterday, bringing fatalities from 1937 to six, while an 8-year-old boy, hit by an automobile as she was roller skating, was in critical condition at Emergency Hospital last night.

Police said he flashed from the curb on his skates directly into the path of the car. Physicians reported he suffered brain concusion and a fractured skull.

Both were taken to Casualty Hospital. Police said Bennett's car struck a pole.

An autopsy performed at the District Morgue yesterday morning disclosed Dick succumbed to the effects of a fractured skull. At the time he was struck, he was treated at Emergency Hospital for a concussion of the brain and lacerations. He was released. December 14 he was taken to Georgetown Hospital.

Dick, proprietor of a hotel agency in the 800 block Fourteenth street northwest, worked daily until he was injured. He is survived by a son and a niece, both of Bethesda, Md.

Police said Fred East, 53, of 1205 Fifteenth street northwest, was driving the car that struck the man. East will appear at a coroner's inquest the date of which has not been set.

Twenty-four motorists lost their permits for temporary periods for speeding.

New Strike Move Made by Taximen

Taxi drivers contemplating a strike will meet tonight in an attempt to muster further strength. So far only 500 of more than 5,000 drivers in the city have favored a strike. The meeting will be held at Typographical Temple.

Wednesday seven members of the executive committee of the group favoring a strike called upon the Public Utilities Commission to "immediately better conditions."

Woman Scientist to Describe Salting Wily Hoatzin's Tail

Miss Gloria Hollister Tonight Will Tell How She Captured Bird-Reptile Link in British Guiana Jungle.

How she captured the rare and elusive hoatzin, last surviving link between birds and reptiles, in South American jungles will be described to the National Geographic Society tonight in an illustrated lecture by Miss Gloria Hollister, young woman scientist.

Miss Hollister, once an associate of Dr. William Beebe in his deep sea work with the bathysphere, was the leader of a scientific expedition into the wilds of British Guiana.

Among the specimens she brought back, in addition, to 12 hoatzin birds, were a golden anteater, a rainbow, tanager, a tiny golden frog that lives in the heart of cacti, and several vampire bats.

Most of the time the youthful explorer traveled in a plane. On her trip she was accompanied by Miss Ruth Brooks, artist, and Arthur Menken, photographer.

Miss Hollister is a fellow of the New York Zoological Society and a member of the Society of Women Geographers. The vampire bats she captured she gave to the Zoo here.

She is a guest of her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Lester G. Wilson, of Chevy Chase, Md.

Burkinshaw Requested Henry Case Reopening

The Department of Justice has entered the Milsie Henry case and will trace guns found in the murder car, through the efforts of Attorney Neil Burkinshaw, who represented Charles Harris, it was learned yesterday.

Harris was saved from the electric chair after being convicted of the murder through recommendations of Attorney General Cumming following an investigation by Federal agents.

Brown Says Protest Units May March

Supt. of Police Will Allow Workers' Alliance Parade Today.

Permits to parade were issued yesterday by the Police Department to 2,000 marchers of the Workers Alliance and an undetermined number of delegates representing striking seamen, who were expected to descend on Washington this morning and next Monday.

First to come to Washington will be the delegates of the Workers Alliance, and the seamen are expected to follow on Monday.

A permit allowing the Workers to parade from Bladensburg road northeast to the Department of Commerce and the White House was granted by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police.

The major said it is doubtful if the marchers will be allowed on the Capitol grounds.

At Bladensburg Road.

Scheduled to arrive by automobile from New York last night, the Workers will form at Bladensburg road northeast and New York avenue. Maj. Brown added that they would be allowed to make all the noise they choose, but that any speeches along the line of march would be prohibited.

No trouble is expected from any of the marchers, Maj. Brown said, but as a precaution the line of the parade will be well patrolled by policemen, equipped with tear gas and riot paraphernalia.

Sirovich Bill.

Representative William I. Sirovich, of New York, introduced a resolution calling for the immediate suspension of the Copeland act, otherwise known as the continuous discharge book act.

Representatives of the seamen said that, if the act is repealed and the resolution passed, there will probably be no march on Washington.

"In my opinion," Sirovich said, "no harm can come from a suspension of this act for a period of six months inasmuch as this strike has tragically affected more than 70,000 merchant seamen."

Telephone Girl Attack Victim, Physician Says

By the Associated Press.

Norwich, Conn., Jan. 14.—While Mrs. Maude Sullivan bowed her head and wept, a medical examiner testified today her 17-year-old daughter, Ellen, had been criminally attacked shortly before she plunged from a window of the Danceland Casino at Ocean Beach last July.

The witness, Dr. Charles Kaufman, of New London, testified at the murder trial of curly haired Robert A. Simpson, bandleader, who is charged with forcing the girl to make the 25-foot plunge which resulted in her death two days later.

Dr. Kaufman followed several youthful friends of the victim, most of whom testified the pretty dark-haired telephone operator had no more than three glasses of beer before she returned to the darkened dance hall early in the morning of July 18.

The medical examiner told of treating Miss Sullivan when she was brought, moaning and semi-conscious, to the Lawrence Memorial Hospital after her head struck the concrete pavement.

Simpson, known as "Bob" to all the dancing sons and daughters along this section of the Long Island Sound, sat taut and twisting throughout the gruesome medical testimony. He contends Miss Sullivan had been drinking too much, and when he went for someone to help quiet her she jumped through the window. He denies having molested her.

High Spots in the Night Spots

Wardman Park Club Features Capital Murals

Other features—the floor in the lounge is an inlaid, linoleum map of the United Sattes . . . a rug of the sam edesign is used during the winter . . . well-placed, illuminated panels increase the bar's magnetism . . . dark blue mirrors in both night club and cocktail lounge reflect a lively air, make your drink seem larger. John Kock (also designer of Carlton's "El Patio") had the new supper-dance club ready for opening Christmas night.

La Paree's excited about one Arthur Kay, master of ceremonies. His impersonations of Ed Wynn and El Brendel are of the best . . . Also at La Paree are the Brady Sisters, with a new interpretation of St. Louis Blues and truckin' . . . Frank Parker as a slow-motion golfer, just beginning the game and having his troubles (including a few spills) . . . Parker Brothers and Lynn with a clever interpretation of Slavic dancing.

Pretty girls and pretty costumes are again the Lotus theme song. This time the revue goes nature-minded, titles itself "Parade of the Elements." Al Norton, master of ceremonies, presents the following: The Roxy Theater team in a waltz number; the rhumba, a la Martin and Virginia, and Barnett and Parker, with their musical comedy fox trot and Cuban dansante. Garcia Gomez still tops the list of entertainers. She promises her comedy Parade Ecstatic in the next few days.

Cincinnati must be proud of Fred Betcher. He's responsible for the smooth arrangements featured by Berk Motley's orchestra, playing out Dude Ranch way. On the side, he takes leading parts in all the skits and novelties, plays the trumpet in the band. . . . Another Ohio lad is Drummer Duffy Rambo, the lad whose bottle novelty and drunken man act continue to please those out front.

"Inaugural Follies" is what they're calling the new revue at the Cocoanut Grove. There are those who say the show is as much a part of the Inauguration ceremonies as what happens on Capitol Hill next Wednesday. . . . Lorraine and Carlos, the "Parade of Nations," Mary Fowler, the Grove Orchestra, all help put the production across. Ralph Hawks, a local boy, is directing the Grove band. . . . Remember him as the talented drummer with Moe Baer at the old Club Habana?

Sasha Partnovsky and his orchestra continue to hold the fort at the Troika . . . have been ever since the opening. This week he's putting on a revue with Mischa Markoff, Capt. Nick Hope, Yascha Nicoroggossoff, Marusia Sava and others.

Two cases of fever in the after-sundown world . . . Brinkley's Johnny Rice had his spring fever early this year, during the January hot spell, is not relaxing in his favorite sport—singing. . . . Jimmy Byrd says his 10 days in Florida were fine, but he's glad he's back at his old post, managing the Cafe of All Nations. Underneath that coat of tan you'll see a big smile, probably laughing at Roy Kiser's excitement over his new microphone. . . . Jack Campbell brings new meaning out of a piano, while Countess Inez continues predicting your future, both amorous and financial.

They say it started in Brazil, De Mar and D'Andre waiting on the street in a little South American town. . . . Right now it's crossed the equator, ended up at the Pall Mall room in the Raleigh Hotel, called itself "Brazilian Flirtation Walk." . . . Eddie Elkins, who has met half of creation since his professional career started back in the twenties, had the "Frederika" cast down to see and hear him . . . also Cross and Dunn from the Earle . . . they seem to like Sally Evans, romantic singer.

The Shoreham continues popular for afternoon dancing, 4:45 to 6:45 o'clock, with Barnee again making himself popular . . . The night club program, with the Wallace Whitleys, Leon Leonidoff and Kay Kernan, is a well-balanced revue with a note of sophisticated appeal . . . Kay Kernan, by the way, was the girl you saw adorning this page on Wednesday.

Tomorrow is Stone Villa Inn's big night. Schenkel, the new head-man, promises entertainment and music you'll not forget . . . and food that hits the spot.

On the Air Today

Comes now Katherine Rowland, of the All States Hotel, to say a few words on the subject of criticism of news broadcasters:

"Do people ever take time out to record a bit of pleasure they have from radio programs, or anything else that is done for their satisfaction? I am indulging in a bit of boiling right now because of what you say in your column today (January 11) about criticisms being aimed at the Postilion.

"Please let me say that I for one derive much pleasure (I'll call it that for want of a better word at the moment) from the Postilion's presentation of the news. Of course he doesn't interpret the news—and indeed it scarcely seems that he would be expected to do that. But he certainly presents it most agreeably and acceptably, and I would appreciate it if you will tell him so for me.

"Just who are we that we should pounce upon each other's imperfections with such abandon! I douot if anyone enjoys everything he hears over the radio, but I wonder why we don't try speaking out favorably about the things we do like rather than picking flaws about our dislikes. Perhaps more could be done in the right direction by this method than by hurting and discouraging each other's honest efforts.

"And speaking of our likes—can you play up 'Today Prelude' in your column some time? Mr. McGrath is giving Washington a most lovely start each week day morning with the heavenly music he gives."

Many thanks to others, too, who expressed themselves in writing following the reference to criticisms of news broadcasts. Most amusing was the card from a gentleman who seethes because Postilion McCarthy says "unquote" instead of "end quote" when reading direct matter!

• • •

Now, about Mr. McGrath. I agree with Miss Rowland that attention long ago should have been given to "Today's Prelude," which, to the uninitiated, is three-quarters of an hour of the world's better music at the rather unusual hour of 7 a. m., daily at WMAL. An intensive and appreciative audience has grown up in support of Mr. McGrath's early morning music. But as is so often the case, the type of person who gets the most pleasure from this class of music is also the last to demonstrate that appreciation in the form of letters to the station. Every indication points, however, to an astonishingly large audience for "Today's Prelude."

The Washington Post, which is running a series of swimming lessons by Johnny Weissmuller and has arranged a public lesson by the great swimmer at the Shoreham next Monday afternoon, will put Johnny and his wife, Lupe Velez, of screen fame, on the air over station WMAL at 5:45 p. m. today.

Appearing before the microphone with Weissmuller and the missus, both of whom are playing in person at Loew's Capitol Theater this week, will be Shirley Povich, sports editor of The Post, and Bill McCormick, of The Post sports staff.

Here and there: The Lunt-Fontanne radio debut is off for awhile. Negotiations fell through when it was learned that "Idiot's Delight" will take to the road in February . . . Anne Jamison returns to "Hollywood Hotel" after a three weeks' vacation. That is, if an appendix operation is a vacation! . . . One of Fred Astaire's three pictures this year will be a single for the star. The other two will be with Ginger Rogers . . . Now comes word that there's nothing to Dick Powell replacing "Do You Want to Be An Actor?" after the first 13 weeks of that show.

Bred to Run

By Walter Haight

SYNOPSIS.

A colt is foaled on the Ridgeway Farm. He is given much advice by his mother as he learns to munch grass and test his wobbly legs. The Ridgeways are forced to dispose of their horses at auction and the colt is "thrown in for good measure" when his mother, Battleship Girl, is sold to the Wilmore Farm. Dorothy Holbrook's auto has a flat tire near the fence and she sees the colt frolicking. Later she persuades her father to buy him, identifying the colt by a white ring around his leg. Taken to Holbrook Manor, the colt grows like a weed. He and "Miss Dorothy," as he calls his owner, become fast friends. The colt meets Trainer Jensen and is given early racing education. Named "Flat Tire," he starts his racing career and loses his rider at the break. Feels disgraced when not allowed to run next out, but wins his following race. Jensen and his friend, the Clear Man, win $4,000. Miss Dorothy and her father leave on a world tour. Flat Tire is "out of the money" in two stake races and is sent to the farm for the winter. Jensen, pressed for cash, needs a sure winner. Puts Flat Tire in a claiming race. He wins, but is claimed by "Big Ed" Moreland-tout and rambler. Flat Tire is sold to Arch, a young millionaire, for $3,000. Sets pace as stablemate winds. "Wolf Tooth" makes him run wide next out. Flat Tire proves he is "mudder" and hears he has been chosen to run in Thanksgiving Handicap. He runs, but is beaten by a nose by his brother. Then follows a round of the Walloh's tracks, as he races for Arch's Oakmont Stable. He suffers slight quarter crack and is sent to farm to recuperate. Our hero returns to racing and, after running second, Arch gives him to Bill Cremor-Thatchaway, who turns him over to Jacob Hertzson, a great trainer. "Flat Tire" is claimed by "Greasy Sam" and shifts from stable to stable over a period of months. Owned by "Slicker," he is taken to a farm in the middle of the night.

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO.

I did not recognize either of the men I met the night I was taken from my stall at the race track. Of course, the little man, who must be the farmer, was a stranger to me.

That first morning on the farm I stood in my stall and waited for the farmer to bring in the plowing harness. I had a mental picture of a big, heavy wooden yoke being placed across my shoulders. I had decided that I would not pull the plow. I would try to feint sickness or lameness. If I did, perhaps the farmer would take me back to the track and demand his horse—I had a feeling that the farmer had traded me for the horse that had been taken out of the van the night before when I was placed in it.

The farmer came to my stall. It must have been about noon. He led me out to the side of the barn, tied my shank strap to a ring, sponged me down and curried me. Of course, he said nothing.

While he was working, one of the cows passed close by and she looked at me with the usual cow stare. I wrinkled my nose at her and she bounded out of kicking range.

Early in the afternoon the farmer turned me out in a small field. The grass was dry, but I nibbled at it. There were seven dark red bulls in the next field. I shared the watering trough with them. The fence had been built over it. I was quite thirsty, but I didn't go near the trough for a while. Finally I edged up. One of the bulls was there—an evil-looking fellow. He snorted and blowed, but I needed water too much to be frightened.

I had been at the farm perhaps three days. Farmer Brown, I never learned his name, but "Farmer Brown" will do, came into the field and put a halter on me. He led me to the far side of the barn and tied me up.

About a half hour later I heard what I thought was a car driving up to the house on the other side of the barn. In a little while three strangers came around the corner of the barn accompanied by Farmer Brown. The strangers were carrying packages.

Stranger No. 2 came over to me, patted me on the neck and said, "You'll be a good fellow and hold still. We're not going to hurt you."

I had not expected any petting from these well-groomed but rather rough-looking fellows. If I wasn't going to be hurt, I would hold still. Farmer Brown had disappeared a moment before. Soon he returned carrying a bucket of steaming water. He went to the rain barrel, took a pan and put some cold water in the bucket.

Stranger No. 3 stuck his hand in the water. It must have been at the right temperature, for he said nothing.

The packages were opened. As far as I could see there were several cans, three brushes of different sizes, two sponges and two bottles containing some white liquid. Two of the men began opening the cans and bottles while Farmer Brown and the other gave me a bath.

As far as I knew, they used only soap and water. But after they had rubbed me fairly dry, they went over me with a liquid that smelled like Bill Cremor-Thatchway's breath after I lost my eighth race for him.

They stood around and talked, probably while the liquid dried. I had kept still. I did not know what was going on, but I was keenly interested. In fact I was too absorbed in what was going on to be frightened.

The fellows soon went to work again. Stranger No. 3 gave the directions as he held my head and Stranger No. 1 put something (it looked and smelled like white paint) on my forehead.

"It's a blaze (as the horsemen call a white area on a horse's face), don't make it too regular. Look at that drawing I made for you," said Stranger No. 3.

Stranger No. 2 held up the drawing while No. 1 applied the paint. Then No. 2 held me so that No. 3 could walk a short distance away and observe his work.

"That's O. K.," said No. 3.

Aside from the smell, whatever had been done to my head did not hurt me.

One of the fellows took up my right foreleg. I could not see what he was doing to it but, after they had gone, I stuck it out and looked. The white ring—the ring that Miss Dorothy had used to identify me when she bought me—was not there. Black fur now covered both of my front legs. I did not like this. If that paint, or whatever it was, was permanent, Miss Dorothy would not recognize me if she saw me.

I couldn't have layed down in my stall that night if I had wanted to. Farmer Brown stretched a chain lengthwise of the stall, hemming me in so that I had only standing room. I was tired out. I could hear only the cows—their "munch, munch, munch" as they chewed their cuds.

I had dozed off but awakened with a start. Somebody was unhooking the latch on my stall. Farmer Brown had left the halter on me. I heard the stall door swing open. A hand reached for the shank strap. I was led out through the darkness. I heard a dull purring. It was the motor of a car. It was a van. I was led into it.

I hoped I was on my way back to the track—away from those plows. I WAS taken to the track.

The van stopped, but I did not hear the men get off the front seat. I listened attentively. Soon I heard a voice say "O. K., Tom."

In an instant, the tailgate was thrown down and I was being led out. To my amazement, there was another horse waiting beside the van. After I was led to the ground, I heard the other horse being led into the van.

The man who held me took me away quickly; up under the stable shed to a stall—it was my old stall in "Gyp Row." He shoved me into it and closed the half door all in the same motion. Then he was gone.

The moment that I set a hoof into my stall I knew that the horse that replaced me in the van had been taken out of the stall a few

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Jan. 14.—The snowman left New England winter sports-wear vendors and mountain hotel keepers holding the bag tonight for the fifth consecutive week.

Well-planned ballyhoo—which styled the section the "leading winter-sports area east of the rockies"—has simmered down to a whisper as ski clubs, innkeepers, merchants and manufacturers frowningly gazed on hills and dales, as barren as they were in November.

There is no way actually to gauge the loss in recreational cash, but some New Hampshire hotel men estimate the snowless ski trails and slopes have cost more than $500,000 since the Christmas holidays. Others put the loss to innkeepers and merchants at $10,000 a week until snow comes.

Prayers Futile.

This season promised to be the biggest in history. At Christmas time manufacturers of winter sports attire and the outlets for skies said sales were far ahead of any other year. The year still can be a record-breaker—if the snow falls soon.

In anticipation of this year's rush, which hasn't even started, 350 miles of scientifically laid-out ski trails and runs were put in order, along with 45 ski tows and 47 ski jumps. Hundreds of open slopes were groomed for novices.

No Snow Trains.

Snow trains—which originated in this sector—have yet to move. Last year they began puffing into the hills New Year's Day and ran practically every Saturday and Sunday until March 8. A total of 24,240 skiers traveled on the Boston & Maine alone.

The railroads, in spite of this, are not complaining. "The passenger department is crying," an official said, "but the engineering department is laughing. You see, if there is no snow you don't have to spend hundreds of thousands of dollars clearing rights of way."

2 D.C. Racing Bills Given Congress

Rep. Norton and Senator Reynolds Both Put in Measures.

Designed to appease the opposition encountered in Cogress last year, revised bills that would provide for legalized horse racing in the District of Columbia were introduced simultaneously in the House and Senate yesterday.

The measures, passage of which would pave the way for the construction of a $1,000,000 track on the site of the old Benning course by Walter O'Hara, of Boston, were sponsored in the House by Mary Norton, chairman of the House District Committee, and in the Senate by Senator Reynolds, of the Senate District Committee.

The last session of Congress pigeonholed a District racing bill last year when Representative Palmisano, of Maryland, led the opposition forces. Palmisano has indicated that he would not oppose passage of the revised bill which models supervision of racing after the Maryland racing laws.

Palmisano had contended that the original bill would give the District track an unfair advantage over Maryland tracks in that 90 racing days were provided, whereas racing days at all Maryland tracks did not total that figure. The revised bill provides for 54 days of racing here.

Palmisano pointed out also that Maryland tracks were taxed $6,000 for each racing day, and thus a similar tax is now included in the District bill. Operators of Washington tracks would also pay the District 1 per cent of the total money wagered and 15 per cent of the track's net revenue.

The Norton-Reynolds bills would also set up a District racing commission, consisting of three members, to be appointed by the District Commissioners, at an annual salary of $2,000 a year.

Should the bills be enacted, it is believed that O'Hara, owner of the profitable Narragansett Park track, would begin building operations at Benning at once and attempt to stage a racing meet next summer.

Representative Norton cited the needs of the District for the revenue that racing would bring and the impossibility of controlling race gambling by law, in support of her bill.

Illness Cured; Vines Quits Hospital

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 14.—Mere money has made a hospital case of Ellsworth Vines, the world professional tennis champion, for the last time.

The slender Californian left the hospital today ending a five-day visit, the result of playing through the first three matches of his money tour with England's Fred Perry in collections of gate receipts. From now on, if he feels a misery coming on he will go to bed regardless of broken engagements and the money involved.

"I feel immensely better now," he said as he posed with his wife for a photographer. "Five days in the hospital got rid of the illness. But I had no business playing in New York, Cleveland or Chicago, and I'll never play again when I'm ill. The money doesn't pay for the chance you take or the misery you suffer."

Speedboat Crash Here Held Accident

New York, Jan. 14 (AP).—The racing commision of the American Power Boat Association today absolved both George C. Reis of Lake George, N. Y., and Herbert Mendelson of South Bend, Ind., of blame in the collision between El Lagarto and Notre Dame during the President's cup speedboat races last summer in Washington.

Today's action supported the decision of the regatta committee at the time of the race. Mendelson had filed complaint after the collision during the second heat. The regatta committee was unable to find anyone who actually witnessed the accident, but upheld Mendelson's statement that it was due to spray which temporarily blinded his driver, Clell Perry. Reis later filed an appeal from this decision and the A. P. B. A. acted as a result of this appeal.

Stu Martin, Card Infielder, Gravely Ill of Appendicitis

Suffolk, Va., Jan. 14.—Stewart "Stu" Martin, second baseman for the St. Louis Cardinals, was fighting for his life in Lakeview Hospital here tonight, where physicians said he was suffering from an abscessed appendix.

Although his condition was described as grave, Dr. J. E. Rawls, chief surgeon, said hope was held for his recovery.

He said an operation was being delayed pending the results of symptomatic treatment now being administered.

Terps Subdue Terror Five, 48 to 36

Benjamin, of W. Md., Is the Game's Star, Tallying Eighteen Points.

College Park, Md., Jan. 14.—Although Stan Benjamin, Westminster long-shot artist tallied 18 points, the combined efforts of Maryland's 12-man basketball squad proved powerful enough to gain the Terrapins a 48-36 victory over Western Maryland here tonight.

Eddie "Choo Choo" Johnson, sophomore center and son of baseball's Big Train, led the Old Liners to victory as he garnered 11 points for the evening.

Starting as a rough and tumble affair, the game grew more turbulent as it progressed, 18 personal fouls being called during the contest.

Maryland jumped into an early lead on two foul shots by Ben Allen and as Al Waters counted a basket and a free toss took a 5-2 advantage.

Here Benjamin the Terror went into action and polled two long shots to put Western Maryland ahead 6-5.

Baskets by Thomas, Waters, Johnson and Keller gave the Old Liners a lead which they never relinquished. By half time the Terrapins had amassed a 24-to-15 margin over the Westminster courtmen.

The second session was a mere repetition of the first. With Johnson, Waters and Thomas finding the basket with regularity, Maryland further increased its lead as the game closed.

Grant Reaches Semifinal

By the Associated Press.

Tampa, Fla., Jan. 14.—Bryan (Bitsy) Grant, Atlanta's Davis Cupper, and Charlie Harris, of West Palm Beach, reached the singles semifinal round of the annual Dixie Tennis tournament today with straight-set victories.

Grant eliminated Wayne Sabin, national ranking doubles star from Los Angeles, 6—3, 6—3, and Harris smooth-stroked a win over Arthur Hendrix, of Lakeland, 9—7, 6—4.

In the other two quarter-final singles matches, set for tomorrow afternoon, Walter Senior, San Francisco, will meet Frankie Parker, Lawrenceville, N. J., star, and Donald Budge, Oakland, Calif., ace, will meet Elwood Cook, of Los Angeles.

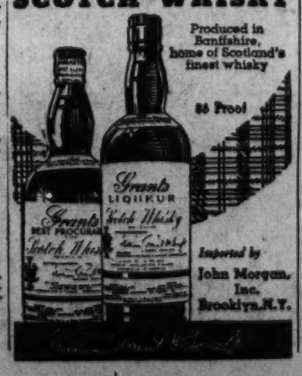

Grant won his opening service at love, then took the second of the first set after Sabin had scored 2 points. Sabin rallied in the third and fourth, winning both to even the match at 2-all. Both games had gone to deuce once.

Roll of Hips Provides Crawl Stroke Power, Weissmuller Points Out for Swim Students

In the upper figure, Weismuller illustrates particularly the correct position of the head and shoulders for the crawl stroke, both pointing directly forward. Below, the correct movement of the feet with knees held stiff and toes turned in.

Swimming Lessons By Weissmuller Listed on Monday

By special arrangement with The Washington Post and Loew's Capitol Theater, Johnny Weissmuller will give a public demonstration and lesson to aspiring swimmers in the Shoreham Hotel pool Monday afternoon at 4:30. His wife, Lupe Velez, of movie fame, will be present. Admission will be by ticket only. Tickets will be available in the sports department of The Post from 5 p. m. until midnight, starting today.

Following the public lesson, Weissmuller will dive in himself for a brief exhibition of the flawless form that carried him to such fame and established records that have never been broken.

This is the second of a series of instructive swimming articles by Johnny Weissmuller, one of the most famous of all aquatic stars. Weissmuller, who later became the famed Tarzan of the screen, is now appearing in person on the stage at the Loew's Capitol.

By Johnny Weismuller.

In attempting the Australian crawl it is necessary to keep the shoulders and head motionless, roll the hips from side to side. Keep knees straight while the legs and ankles are relaxed and the toes turned in. With the knees held stiff, the legs and ankles will move up and down with the roll of the hips. This natural movement of the legs is the basis of the kick that helps give power to a swimmer.

As the downward kick is started, the knee is practically straight, the toes turned in, the legs and ankle relaxed. The power for the kick comes from the thigh muscles, with all pressure from the hips. The knee is kept stiff and the leg and ankle follow the force that is exerted by the hips. If this kick is practiced properly, the legs, and ankles, and toes follow their course with the roll of the hips giving a powerful body drive.

Keep the shoulders square, the head straight, and body relaxed from the waist up. Exert all power from the thigh muscles and do not attempt to push forward.

Do not hesitate to spend plenty of time on the kick, so it will become perfectly natural before you try it in the water. Perfect it while lying flat on a table first and then go into the water for the actual test.

ALTROCK OFF FOR SOUTH.

Nick Altrock, the Nats' comedian-coach, entrained yesterday for Florida for six weeks of golf and fishing before reporting at the Nats' Orlando training camp. Mrs. Altrock, recovering from a recent illness, accompanied him.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Wake Forest lost another decision to George Washington last night, but this time, unlike their historic football duel, no fifty-ninth-minute scoring play was necessary, as the Colonials smeared the Deacons with the thick coating of a 55-33 defeat.

An over-capacity crowd—largest to cram its way into the H street telephone booth since 1933 when St. John's of Brooklyn was the visiting attraction, filled every nook and cranny of the place, and left more outside clamoring for admittance.

The game was fast and well played—for exactly 7½ minutes—then G. W. began to assert its all-round superiority over the Southerners and it became a rather grim affair. If some culprit had whistled a lullaby he probably could have lulled the customers to sleep.

Southerners Outclassed.

Bill Reinhart's boys passed over, around and under the Deacons as Kiesel, O'Brien and Goldfaden pumped enough leather into the bucket to give their team a 33-17 plurality at halftime. Wake Forest helped itself to a 2-0 on Waller's potshot in the first minute of play, and later summoned enough scoring punch to knot the count at 8-all after the Colonials had forged in front, but between times and after it absorbed a thorough lesson in the principles of basket ball.

Hopelessly whipped early in the second half, Wake Forest turned to the time-worn trick of baiting the officials as balm for its wounds, but this was of little help. The officials continued to call them as they saw 'em, and the Colonials converted all but two of their charity shots. Two left the game via the four-fouls route and the remainder were in danger of being momentarily removed for similar reasons.

Freshmen Win.

Genie Palatine Shows Keen Speed to Win Hialeah Feature

3d Straight Goes to Filly

Denemark Horse Beats Jamboree, Staging Strong Finish.

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 14.—With the bustle and fanfare of opening day written into turf history, the 46-day meeting settled down to normal stride here today, with another large crowd on hand to see a card event for 4-year-olds and upward, headed by the Vero Beach, 1-mile event for 4-year-olds and upward. As expected, Mrs. Emil Denemark won another feature when her consistent filly, Genie Palatine, the $7 for $2 choice in the field of eight, triumphed in a drive by one length in 1:36 4-5.

J. B. Partridge's neglected Sunanair headed Mrs. Payne Whitney's Jamboree out of the place. It was a double for Trainer B. S. Mitchell and Jockey Charlie Kurtsinger, who had won the fourth event with the favored E. D. Shaffer 3-year-old, Log.

Genie Palatine amused the crowd by her antics before the race. After entering the main track from the paddock, the daughter of Genie spread her feet apart and stood perfectly still, refusing for some minutes to budge despite the efforts of her rider and outrider, "Red Coat" Murray. She finally got over her stubbornness and proceeded to chalk up her third consecutive victory.

Jamboree showed keen speed to lead the pack through the backstretch. He was closely attended by Genie Palatine, Sunanair and Bird Flower. As the field swept around the big bend leaving the backstretch, Kurtsinger clucked to the favorite. Genie Palatine responded and forged just ahead of Jamboree, while Sunanair was clear of the others. Genie drew away in the final drive and Sunanair grabbed Jamboree at the wire. Gyral was a close fourth, while the slow-starting Reminding closed impressively to be fifth over Bird Flower, Blackbirder and the dull-performing Columbiana, which was a close second choice in the betting.

Maetall Wins Opener.

The second batch of baby 2-year-olds performed in the three furlong curtain raiser on today's card. Maetall, a son of Tall Timber owned by De Witt Page's Maemere Farm, had the speed of the lot and was on the head end of the 15 horse field all the way.

Long shot players continued to monopolize the honors when Dirigible, a $25.50 for $2 hazard, just got up on the outside to take a photo finish verdict over Dixie Princess, another that drew a light play. Fervid, coupled with Balcony, was a length behind.

The third was just another party for outsiders. Ladfield, an 8-year-old sprinter, received a powerful ride from Jimmy Stout to catch Epical in the last stride. He returned $17. Epical beat Miney Myerson a half length for the place.

Elmer Dale Shaffer's fast stepping Log, a galloping winner of her two races at Tropical Park, made it three straight in the top flight, a seven-furlong test for 3-year-old fillies named after the famous Whitney filly, and secondary attraction of the day.

Terp Frosh Down Tech Five, 41-13

The Maryland Freshmen, with two former Tech High boys in the lineup, tripled the score on Tech's basketball team yesterday to take a 41-13 decision at College Park. Wes Snow and Bill Rea, the erstwhile Techmen scored four and three points respectively. Spero Kolius, Roosevelt's All-high forward last year, also contributed four points.

minutes before. Just what was being done to me I did not know. I was taken away. I was placed in an ill-smelling farm barn. I was painted and now I had been returned to my stall. And why was that other horse put in my stall while I was away? I would question Tiny Tiddle in the morning. It was too late to bother him now.

Despite the fact that I had second-hand bedding, it was a relief to lie down after my night of standing and my excitement of the past few days. I was soon asleep and believe that I dreamed that Mother and I were lying in the Ridgeway clover watching the blinking lights of autos climbing the hill.

Tiny Tiddle awoke before I did. His head was sticking out of the stall door when I arose, shook myself, and looked around the corner.

"No wonder you slept so well last night," said Tiny Tiddle, "after all that workout and parading you got yesterday."

"What do you mean—working and parading? Why I wasn't even here yesterday," I replied.

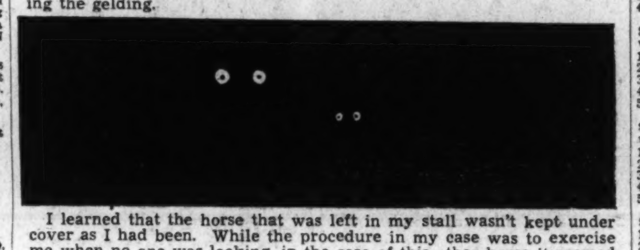

"You must be loco," went on Tiny Tiddle, "you must have gotten dizzy being walked around the ring."

Then it dawned on me. My disguise was so carefully done that Tiny Tiddle was mistaking me for the horse that had been in my stall for the past three days. It took me quite a while to convince him that I was Flat Tire and it was only after he had leaned far over and put his nose to me forehead that he was willing to admit that he had been fooled.

"Never saw or heard of the like of it in my life," said the amazed Tiny Tiddle. "You're the first horse I ever knew who used rouge."

Even in my befuddled state of mind I could not help but whinney loudly.

Now that I had established my true identity, I turned to questioning the gelding.

I learned that the horse that was left in my stall wasn't kept under cover as I had been. While the procedure in my case was to exercise me when no one was looking, in the case of this other horse it seemed to be the objective of his handlers to make sure that he WAS seen. Tiny Tiddle told me that he was not only sent on the track for workouts in the morning, but also was galloped around the track between races in the afternoon.

But the most amazing thing was that Tiny Tiddle told me the other horse, he didn't know his name, was scheduled to race on that very afternoon!

The mental blow that almost knocked me off my hoofs came a few minutes after. A man walked up to my stall. I looked up. There was no mistaking him. It was Stranger No. 3 of the Amalgamated Society of Horse Painters. Seeing him was bad enough, but he had to speak.

Possibly he did not know I had been returned from the farm. If he did know about the game of "horse, horse, who's the horse," that went on during the night, then he deliberately was trying to make somebody believe that I was Stomach Pump. Then it dawned on me. They were going to run me in place of Stomach Pump. As the hours slipped by, I became more and more convinced. Stranger No. 3 put me through the usual routine of a horse that is soon to go to the barrier. Each time a person was within hearing distance of him, he made sure that he called me Stomach Pump. Flat Tire was bad enough—but I despised that Stomach Pump. Where did they get a name like that for a horse? The man who named Stomach Pump wouldn't have tacked a name like that on his son.

If there were any doubts in my mind as to my duties for that particular afternoon they were erased about 4 o'clock. Stranger No. 3 tossed a blanket over me and led me toward the paddock.

I, Flat Tire, an honest race horse, was to run in the role of an imposter. I knew that Mother would never approve of that.

Eastern Shore Baseball Loop Assured

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Salisbury, Md., Jan. 14.—Eight towns today signified a desire to apply for franchises in the Eastern Shore Baseball League and even though some may later find it impossible to meet qualifications, reorganization of the once well-known circuit was assured after a lapse of eight years.

Centreville, Salisbury, Crisfield, Pocomoko, Cambridge, Eastern and Fredericksburg, in Maryland, and Dover, Del., were tentatively considered applicants at a meeting of league sponsors here this afternoon.

Tom Kibler, athletic director at Washington College, Chestertown, was named president pro tem of the circuit. It was voted to meet in Cambridge, January 24, to definitely effect a permanent league organization and formally apply for club franchises.

Two clubs of higher classification sent representatives who definitely stated they would place clubs in two of the towns. Joe Sambria, Baltimore sportsman, owner of the Trenton, N. J., club of the New York-Pennsylvania League, was prepared to apply for a franchise in Salisbury. Cambria also has had a verbal agreement with the Washington Nationals.

McAboy, Terp Ring Aid, Is Made Marine Officer

Lyman McAboy, assistant varsity boxing coach and head freshman coach at the University of Maryland, yesterday was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Marine Corps Reserve by Maj. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, U. S. M. C.

With the Leathernecks he will be under his present boss, "Heinie" Miller, commandant of the Fifth Battalion, Fleet Marine Corp Reserve, to which McAboy has been assigned as athletic officer and assistant to the plans and training officer.

Under McAboy, the Marines will launch a large athletic program, including baseball, which team he will coach, manage and play third base for. The team probably will compete in one of The Post's leagues.

DEAR AL:

Whopper's sensational race makes him a threat in the $50,000 added Widener, the feature of the winter racing here. He seems entirely recovered from the serious ailment that kept him off the tracks since last July Fourth. There is a possibility that Whopper may run in both the Santa Anita Handicap in California and the Widener. If he does he will be shipped by plane between the two points. Hialeah's track has never been faster. Jockey Joe Wagner seems to have routed the jinx that followed him last summer when he was the victim of accidents several times. Jockey Lester Balaski and Johnny Bryson have joined the Florida riding colony. Hialeah is giving $1,500 in prize money to leading trainers. The season has been divided into three parts, with $500 to be distributed at the end of each period. I heard a rumor that Clocker Mike had died and had come back to this world as a flamingo (pink and white bird that lives in Hialeah's infield lake.) I doubt the truth of the rumor, but I will agree that Mike has been a "bird" for some time. BILL.

First race—Singing Slave is said to be a good one. Comes from a stable of fit ones and may do it. However, as I've said before don't take these kind of races seriously. Conniption and Moscap may gain money places.

Second race—Ethel's Choice may go well in this field. She has her speed on occasions. Joe Renick will do the riding. Ipso Facto deserves a chance. Pottage may be better than generally rated.

Third race—Warren, Jr. will like this seven-furlong route and, despite the weight of 115 pounds, I'm going to take my chances with him. Bellum has been hiding and is due to awaken. Speed for the show end.

Fourth race—Owaller needed that last. He has the rail position today and with Kurtsinger to boot him I see no reason for mistakes. Noel H. and Fencing to take care of the others.

Fifth race—Prairie Dog comes out of that "trying" Denemark barn and will be hard to beat here. That 117 pounds should not stop him. Zaca is fit and should take the place ahead of El Yale.

Sixth race—Sorceress is on the improve. Comes out of the mile chute from the inside post position and has the speed to take advantage. Tap On and Talleyrand seem headed for places in the pay-off.

Seventh race—Venetian ran a nice second for us at long odds at the other track. I expect him to gain a set of brackets in this. Be Big and Polo Bar may make the top one step.

Best bet—Owaller.

Wilson Plays Eastern in First Game

Roosevelt Team Sure It Will Turn Tables on Favorites.

By John R. Vosburgh.

Primed for an upset with all the confidence of a team of Max Schmelings, Roosevelt High swaps passes with Central's rollicking basket brigade today in their first get-together in the interhigh series. The Rough Riders start galloping directly after Eastern and Woodrow Wilson have opened the weekly double-header at Tech High at 3:15 p. m.

Already well-packed with thrills, the series appears slated for a new episode of gym-shaking quality when Roosevelt and Central collide. On the face of its 28-17 win over Eastern in its first series tilt, Central appears a definite favorite, especially in view of Roosevelt's 22-19 defeat at the hands of Tech Tuesday.

Everybody apparently thinks so but the Roosevelt boys and Coach Herman Littman. With calm confidence the Rough Riders announce that they have yet to reach their normal form in the series. Stronger, according to Coach Littman, than the Roosevelt team which finished second to Eastern last year, the Orange and Blue considers itself very much in the series.

Coach Jack Ray, of Central, on the other hand, has had his team peppering the basket like a machine-gun squad all week and is rather proud of its achievement in the University of Richmond carnival, Saturday night, where it was beaten out in an extra period by the powerful John Marshall High team of Richmond.

Charlie Clark, the boy whose 12 points helped sink Eastern's champions, is expected to be very much in evidence today. Coach Ray is also starting Sam Fox.

Coach Sees Roosevelt As Likely Title Winner

ROYAL. BAILEY. FRIDRICH. COMER.

The golden-clad man on horseback decorating the jerseys of Roosevelt High's basketball team is not a Crusader, Coach Herman Littman explained yesterday. It is Teddy Roosevelt charging up San Juan Hill and the coach thinks it is very appropriate because his Rough Riders are now making an uphill fight to get back in the interhigh running.

Like Teddy, Roosevelt will get to the top of the hill, Coach Littman believes, or pretty close to the top. He thinks he has a better team now than he had last year and that team finished second to Easterns' champions and Eastern is no longer what it used to be.

Were Off Form.

From there the former N. Y. U. star launched into a quiet narrative of the sudden attack of off-form Roosevelt suffered in its game with Tech which it lost, 22-19. The most he could say for Tech was that it played "heads-up ball" all the way, but the coach admitted Roosevelt was not what it should have been.

"The boys were really away off," Littman continued. "It wasn't the Roosevelt team I had been seeing all season. Maybe it was a good thing they got that bad game out of their systems early in the season, because I don't think they'll ever get that sloppy again."

Tech took a 9-to-0 lead and this sudden turn of events sealed Roosevelt's fate for the afternoon. The Rough Riders finished strongly, like they have all season, and the coach is not particularly worried about their scrappy qualities.

Better Than in '36.

Littman is willing to concede the tremendous loss he suffered by the graduation of Frank Beamer and Spero Kolius, his all-high star, but he still thinks Roosevelt is better this year than it was last. He has Capt. Frank Bailey, a star last year; Joe Comer, center, and Bill Fogel, all back in uniform, working like the proverbial clockwork.

And the emigration East of Ray Fridrick, the Guyon (Ohio) schoolboy star, gave the coach another unexpected veteran. The other position is still somewhat in doubt, but Sherrard Robertson, nephew of Clark Griffith, is very much in the running, along with Blaine Wicklein, Paul Rusher and Doyle Royal.

Roosevelt has swamped Montgomery Blair High and nosed out St. John's, but has lost to the Maryland freshmen, as well as Tech. The Rough Riders play Central today and are awaiting the battle with all the "wim and wigor" of the man on their jerseys charging up San Juan Hill. VOSBURGH.

Women Bowl Today for $100 Prize

The eyes of the Nation's leading pinwomen will be concentrated on the sixth annual Dixie Sweepstakes today which holds the spotlight on the local duckpin calendar.

Word has reached the committee for the event that at least nine of the foremost women stars from Connecticut will be on hand, including such stars as Christine Kirk, Florence LaBarr, Alice D'Lugo, Cora Kenyon, Irene Krasnick, Rose Simmons, Olive Johnson and Frances Moroney.

Perhaps the strongest aggregation of pinwomen ever assembled on one team will carry the banner for the local contestants, Galt Davis, mogul of the Rosslyn drives, entering in a body his Rosslyn team, champions of the Ladies District League. Each a champion in her own right, the team includes such stars as Blanche Wootton, Evelyn Ellis, Gladys Lynn, Rena Levy, Lucy Rose and Lorraine Gulli. Among the other local stars will be Lucille Young, Irene Scott, Pauline Ford and Polly Shugrue.

The first block of the event will be rolled on the Columbia Alleys, starting at 12 noon, shifting to the Lucky Strike for the 3:30 block and winding up at Rosslyn at 7:30.

Standings and records were turned topsy-turvy in a night of heavy maple mauling in the District League with the Rose Liquor team finally coming out of the melee to win first place on total pinfall, although losing two games to the champion Heurich Brewers. The Washington Brewery five dropped from the top of the heap when it was dealt a stunning upset by a season record of 1,910, with games of 627, 658 and 645 shot by the rejuvinated Lucky Strike aggregation.

Lucky Strike's victory moved them from fifth place to a tie for second with Occidental when the latter bowed twice to Convention Hall and Galt Davis, collecting the top set of 409, aided Arcadia's odd-game decision over Georgetown. Harry Aiken shot a 163 game for the Arcadians, contributing to the latters' high game of 673.

D.S.Stadium Model Exhibited by Ickes

With the hope that Congress will be prompted to give the Nation's Capital a suitable athletic stadium, a carefully scaled model of a bowl to seat 120,000 persons will be put on display shortly in the Capitol rotunda. The project would probably be located at the end of East Capitol street and the Anacostia River.

Secretary Harold Ickes of the Department of the Interior is reported to be very much interested in the stadium project and is speeding arrangements to display the elaborate model athletic plant. The latter would not only include a stadium but also a National Guard armory, auditorium, indoor sports center and a demonstration field.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Johnny Weissmuller, himself, is getting a bit weary of Tarzan. Jungle life, even the custom-built Hollywood variety where he was forced to encounter no more dangerous hazards than friendly chimpanzees, camera-conscious zebras and saplings specially geared by studio engineers to his own style of transit, holds no more attraction for the screen's famed Tarzan character.

POVICH.

It has been proverbial of the stage that the comedian has yearned for serious roles, that melodrama has been the secret ambition of many a stooge, and now Weissmuller who made his fame and fortune simulating Edgar Rice Burroughs' white man among the simians, fancies himself a player of heavies.

He said so yesterday at his hotel here, where he was awaiting the first of his series of personal appearances with the tempestuous Mexican lass, Lupie Velez, who in private life is Mrs. Weissmuller.

"Tarzan was all right, still is, I hope," said Weissmuller, "but who wants to be Tarzan all his life? I have an idea I'd go well in costume plays, with headdresses and spangles and everything, don't you think? Big, medieval stuff, or ancient history, perhaps, huh? I can give 'em physique and I understand there's quite a few stories for me. How about a Ben Hur?

He could give 'em physique all right, this 6-foot 3½-inch giant who graduated to the Hollywood lots from the swimming pools back in 1931. Out of 400 applicants for the Tarzan role they chose this young giant who had won five Olympic swimming titles for the United States, who didn't know a motion picture camera from an infernal machine.

While Miss Velez entertained old friends with what she called her new acts—impersonations of Hollywood people she doesn't like—Weissmuller quaffed a beer and told the story of his Hollywood debut.

"I was selling bathing suits out there—getting $250 a week for it, too—when my old coach called me up and told me they were holding this Tarzan test and that he had signed me up for it. I went out to the lot, climbed a few trees for 'em, made a couple of lucky leaps and they gave me the job, all in one day.

"Naw, there was nothing risky about it. That chimp that was my companion was a friendly fellow, he wasn't even an ape—apes come bigger. All the animals were more or less domesticated, but that chimp was a nuisance at that. He had a terrific appetite for the make-up I used all over my body and he was fond of licking it off. I let him feed when I wasn't working."

But how about those sensational leaps from tree to tree at great heights? Suppose he lost his grip, then what?

"That was kinda funny, too. I took a few falls, but none of 'em were nasty. When I first started out they erected the jungle trees over a big net just in case, but I found out it takes an acrobat to land in a net without getting hurt. So then they built all the trees over a pool and if I fell, well, there I was in the water where I had been most of my life. I knew how to fall into water."

He's proud, though, of that Tarzan yell, says he concocted it himself and it helped to get him the job. But he almost came up with a set of injured feelings during a radio program in New York last week when the script called for his yell. Seems like the script men, who thought Weissmuller's yell was a phoney, had contracted for a double to fake the Tarzan shriek. Johnny, like a true artist, insisted on using his own lungs.

In Short—

The marital fisticuffs of the Weissmullers, which have provided choice Hollywood gossip, are forever at an end, they both say . . . "Sometimes I get mad at Johnny for the silliest things," said Miss Velez, "but it blows over . . . last week I wouldn't talk to him for seven hours because . . . you guess . . . because he tried to tell me that Marlene Dietrich wore pants in Hollywood before Greta Garbo when I am in Hollywood four years before he got there and see Garbo wear pants before Dietrich discovered America" . . . Weissmuller believes everybody can be taught to swim if their fear of the water is conquered tactfully . . . the old-fashioned idea of shoving nonswimmers into the water is the bunk, he says . . . it may instill in the victim a permanent horror of the water . . . Weissmuller is not surprised that most of his swimming records have been broken . . . the boys are better coached, he says, and the troughs erected now on the sides of the pools prevent the waves from rebounding into the swimmers' paths . . . Weissmuller, who took up swimming for his health, attributed his success to his abnormally large hands that he turned to good use as paddles . . . his swimming suits used to be so sheer he could tuck them in his lapel pocket like a handkerchief . . . his chief diversion now? . . . swimming.

Garibaldi Pins Pinto in 21 Minutes

Gino Garibaldi, the perennial bad man, won the right to meet Title-Claimant Dean Detton next week by pinning Stanley Pinto after 21 minutes of furious fussing in an alleged wrestling match at Turner's Arena last night.

Gino was aided and abetted by Referee Benny (Bubble) Bortnick, who inserted himself between the two combatants while they were standing in a neutral corner, managed to fall between them as they went to the mat and so muddled matters that Garibaldi was able to pin Stnaley for the necessary count.

A crowd of about 1,000 watched Gino subdue Stanley in one of the roughest bouts of the year. Both contestants socked away at will, and strangely enough their socks sounded as though they carried plenty of authority.

The introduction of Detton next Thursday night will mark a departure here. In the past, Promoter Joe Turner has booked grapplers only from the circuit controlled by Rudy Dusek, who pulls the strings on last night's piffawmers.

Detton is managed by Toots Mondt, a business rival of Dusek's, who also books such outstanding grunt and groan artists as Man Mountain Dean, Joe Savoldi, George Zaharias and many others. Turner, one of the few independent promoters in the game, said last night that he would continue to book the Mondt wrestlers here, indicating that a flock of new faces are about to be shown here.

In a semifinal scheduled for 30 minutes, John Katan flopped Ernie Powers in 21½ minutes with a series of body slams. In preliminaries slated to last 30 minutes, Hans Kampfer and Scotty McDougal worked to a draw, George McLeod tossed Babe Caddock and Hank Barber flipped Jim Wright.

Spiders Decide To Forfeit 2 Terp Bouts

Lancelot Jacques' meteoric rise in the realm of collegiate beak-busting will be deferred, temporarily at least, tomorrow night when Maryland squares off with Richmond in the second portion of a twin bill at College Park, simply because there will be no 175-pound bout.

Handicapped by a lack of material in this division, and hearing glowing tales of Jacques' murderous punching last week against Tony Ortenzi, the Spiders decided to forfeit at this weight and save their candidate the bloody trouble of ascertaining personally, whether Jacques is all the Terps claim for him.

While they were at it the Spiders also elected to forfeit the 145-pound fight, wherein Ivan Nedomatsky was to have appeared, staking their hopes of winning the match on the outcome of the remaining six bouts. Nedomatsky and Johnny Gormley probably will act as seconds for the Old Line larrupers.

But there will be the usual eight bouts for the fans' entertainment, as Richmond readily agreed to a proposition to fight two 125-pound and 155-pound bouts. The second two, however, will be exhibition scraps and will have no bearing on the final tabulation of points.

Landon Defeated, 24-14 By Woodward Prep

Woodward Prep's strong basketball team continued its winning ways yesterday by outclassing Landon Prep, 24-14, in the Kensington Armory. Landon kept well in the running in the first half, but Woodward applied its scoring pressure in the third period to draw away to a 16-7 lead after leading only 8-7 at the half.

Huck Hughes, of Landon, was high scorer with nine points. It was Woodward's fifth victory in seven games.

Gonzaga Swamps Little Hoyas, 33-10

Continuing their startling drive to the top of Washington's scholastic basketball heap, Gonzaga High's basketball aces swamped Georgetown Prep, 33-10, yesterday at Garrett Park, Md., in the opening game of the annual Catholic Prep School League series.

Card Boxers Set For Duke Saturday

Catholic University's boxing team completed training for tomorrow night's match with Duke, with an overtime workout yesterday afternoon that brought a smile of approval to Coach Eddie La Fond's face. The squad, with one exception, is in fine physical condition, and will be ready for the highly touted Blue Devils.

Catholic's hopes of upsetting the Southerners have been dealt an almost fatal blow by the loss of Fred Rogers, star light-heavyweight, who is confined to the infirmary with an attack of influenza. Either Ed Dunne, who took his first pugilistic step last week, winning by a knockout, or Frank Gorman, a rugged but inexperienced lad, will get the berth.

Duke boasts a couple of sophomores whom La Fond is afraid may be too potent for his men, Swede Vincent, junior middle-weight, and Charlie Marchant, heavyweight. If they are on the card local collegiate fans will see two prospective conference champions, according to Coach Ad Warren, a title-holder in his day.

Labor Pacts In New Forms Seen by Ayres

Lagging Foreign Trade a Cause of Unemployment, He Also Says.

By the United Press.

Cleveland, Jan. 14.—Col. Leonard P. Ayres, Cleveland trust company economist, said in his monthly business bulletin today that the growth of industrial unionism "appears likely to bring important changes in working agreements."

While industrial production had increased in December to an estimated 6.7 per cent below normal, and the market value of New York stock exchange securities has been advanced 28 per cent in the past year, "our foreign trade is not sharing in the general recovery" and is a serious cause of unemployment, Ayres said.

"At present it seems hardly likely that the labor conflicts that are now in progress will be carried through to conclusions in the old-fashioned way," Ayres said. "The reason why it seems unlikely is that settlements of industrial disputes do not seem to be either conclusive or lasting where sit-down strikes become the habitual recourse of employes," he said.

"Perhaps some new form of contract can be devised by which workers will covenant and carry through their parts of working agreements to which employers are also bound, or perhaps new forms of payment will be arranged which will aid in solving the difficulties."

Copper 13 Cents, Highest Since 1930

New York, Jan. 14 (AP).—The price of copper was advanced one-half cent a pound today to 13 cents for domestic delivery, a record since 1930.

Excess Reserves Rise $90,000,000

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board last night reported a seasonal $90,000,000 increase in excess member bank reserves during the week ended January 13. The excess reserves stood at $2,100,000,000. They are expected to rise even higher by the end of January, and—because they might provide the foundation for ballooning of credit—the Federal Reserve Board is keeping a close watch.

The week's rise in excess reserves was attributed to a $102,000,000 post-holiday drop in money in circulation to $6,371,000,000. There was $649,000,000 more money in the hands of the public, however, than for the same week a year ago. Monetary gold stock rose $35,000,000 during the week to another all-time peak of $11,306,000,000.

Snowstorms In Wheat Belt Lower Prices

Corn and Oats Decline After Reaching New High Points.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 14.—Despite soaring of corn and oats prices today to record heights, a persistent recurrence of wheat market downturns proved finally the dominant factor regarding grains.

Reports of beneficial snowfalls in domestic wheat territory Southwest and West, together with predictions of additional snow tonight, did much to pull wheat values lower.

At the close wheat was ⅝@1½ cents under yesterday's finish, May, 133⅞@134; July, 115¾@⅞; September, 111½@⅝; Corn ⅛ lower to ⅝ higher, May new, 111⅞@112; July new, 107¼@⅜; September, 103@103⅛; oats ⅛ off to ¼ up, May, 54¼@⅝, and rye, 1¼@1⅜ down, May, 112½. Cotton Consumption Reaches New High

A new peak in cotton consumption by domestic mills for a single month in more than three years was reported yesterday by the Census Bureau as it released December totals.

Officials said consumption of 692,921 bales in December was the highest monthly total since June, 1933, when Mills were rushing work because NRA code regulations were to become effective. The December total was the third largest on record, being surpassed only by June, 1933, with 697,261 bales and March, 1927, with 693,081 bales.

Demand for Motor Stocks Holds Price Average Steady

By Frederick Gardner.
Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, Jan. 14.—Motors and specialties shifted to high speed gears in today's stock market and climbed 1 to around 5 points at the best, some to new recovery peaks. Many other issues, however, found offerings too large to surmount and closing prices were highly indefinite.

Spurring the automotive group were conferences which got under way between General Motors officials and union representatives looking for means to settle the present strike.

There were exceptionally active flurries during the session, with subsequent slow intervals. Transfers totaled 3,260,410 shares, compared with 3,081,740 yesterday. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks again finished unchanged at 71.9.

The sugars had a bad day following upon advices Secretary Wallace may support a processing tax because domestic processors are becoming "unduly enriched" by the present quota system.

Farm implements, on the other hand, enjoyed one of their periodical jumps which brokers attributed as much to a "thin" market for these shares as to brightening prospects for the agricultural machinery makers.

Coppers stiffened for a moment when one producer hoisted the domestic price to 13 cents a pound, a new top since 1930. Others, though, failed to follow the advance and red metal shares fell back in late dealings. It was not overlooked that the foreign cartel had temporarily abandoned restrictions on output and that the export price dropped.

Low-Priced Shares Active.

Of the 20 most active stocks of the day, 13 ended at quotations under $20 a share. Low-priced utilities were among these, but the majority failed to make progress and several were down substantially.

Some steels tilted forward in sympathy with the better feeling toward motors. Capacity mill operations were forecast when adjustment of the labor impasse releases a flood of orders from automobile centers.

Outstanding gainers included Chrysler at 121⅜, General Motors, 67¼; Briggs Mfg., 56½; United States Steel, 80⅛; National Steel, 71; Hercules Powder, 164⅞; Collins & Aikman, 58⅞; Radio, 12½; Container Corporation, 25⅞; J. I. Case, 157½; Deere, 120; International Harvester, 107; Auburn, 33; Du Pont, 179¾; General Foods (responding to an advance in the dividend rate), 41⅛; Murray Corporation, 19¼; Continental Can, 67½; American Can, 116¾, and Electric Auto-Lite, 42⅛.

Among losers were Fajardo Sugar, off 4 at 64. Lesser declines were shown by American Sugar at 54½, South Porto Rico Sugar 38⅝, American Telephone 183¼, Union Pacific 129, New York Central 43, American Smelting 95¾, Kennecott 62, Cerro De Pasco 71¼, Reynolds Tobacco B 56½, American Tobacco B 96¾, American Crystal Sugar 29¾, Air Reduction 76, Consolidated Edison 46, North American 33⅝ and American Water Works 28¾.

While commodities were mixed, new highs for the move were recorded by futures of cocoa, raw hide and raw silk. Wheat at Chicago was off ¾ to 1½ cents a bushel and corn was down ⅛ to ⅝. Cotton was 25 cents a bale lower to 10 cents improved.

Building Volume At Peak Since 1931

New York, Jan. 14.—Although still below the records of former so-called prosperous years, the building industry has made considerable progress in the past three years, Dun & Bradstreet say today. The volume of building permits at 215 cities for the full 12-month period of 1936 rose to $980,501,615. This was the largest since 1931, when permits totaled $1,158,963,273. The latest figure showed a gain of 64.3 per cent over the 1935 aggregate of $596,686,708, and was more than three times the 1933 total of $313,676,276. Increases over a year ago were reported by every geographical section of the country.

Rail Bonds Higher.

Numerous railroad issues trudged to new high ground in the bond market today as most sections of the list worked higher. The advance was too ragged to be called a rally. Other groups edging upward included United States Governments, foreigns and utilities. Domestic industrials gave up fractions and corporate low-yield loans slipped over.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau's hint that Government officials were watching with interest the rising tendencies of bankers' acceptance rates was the principal subject of discussion in investment circles. Few observers were willing to interpret the statement, but it was pointed out that Federal bonds rose mildly coincident with the Secretary's statement.

The improvement in rail and utility issues was more robust than other groups. "Katy" 5s gained 1¾ to 86½, New Haven 5s added 1½ at 65 and smaller gains were made by 'Frisco 4½s, Northwestern 4¾s and bonds of Chicago & Eastern Illinois. Reactionary were Alleghany stamped 5s, Illinois Central 4¾s and St. Paul 5s. The Associated Press averages for 20 carrier bonds made a new 1936-1937 high at 98.7, up .1 of a point.

Utilities closed generally higher. An outstanding swing was shown by Abitibi 5s, up 3⅞, at 98⅜. International Hydro-Electric 6s, however, moved sharply the other way, losing 2⅝. to 86⅛.

United States Governments advanced 1-32 to 9-32 of a point, with Treasury issues making the widest improvement.

The foreign section was less active and prices were narrow. South Americans continued to attract the most support, although central European obligations improved a little.

Low yield corporates slid lower, the Associated Press compilation for ten bonds dropping .1 of a point to 113.9. Transactions fell off sharply, volume for all bonds totaling $15,785,000, face value, against $19,639,000 Wednesday.

Amick Elected Vice President Of Riggs Bank

W. H. Taylor and E. B. Shaw Also Promoted by Directors.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Following the organization meeting of the directors of the Riggs National Bank, held yesterday, Robert V. Fleming, president of the bank, announced that three promotions had been made in the official staff of the bank.

Earle M. Amick, who has held the position of assistant vice president since June 30, 1931, was elected a vice president. He has long been in the banking business, having started at the bottom of the ladder in Cumberland, Md., later becoming a junior officer of the Bank of Martinsburg, Martinsburg, W. Va., and in 1918 he came to the Riggs National Bank to become its general bookkeeper. 'Mail Bride' Arrested By Postal Authorities

Batesville, Ark., Jan. 14 (AP).—Postal authorities today charged Mrs. Lyle (Polly) Jones, 30-year-old mother, with defrauding more than 100 men of $15 to $30 each by offering herself as a "mail bride."

Postoffice Inspector William White said "she confessed she had written many letters to men promising to marry them and asking each for money so that she might buy necessary clothes and transportation to her 'new home.'"

Torrential Rains Flood Four States of Midwest

Lowlands were flooded, a number of householders marooned, highways inundated and several communities virtually encircled by water in parts of Illinois, Missouri, Indiana and Ohio. Police and firemen took to boats to rescue families in the outlying sections of Indianapolis.

Shaky Railroad Securities Sold, Wheeler Says

By the Associated Press.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, charged yesterday that although certain officials of the Guaranty Co. were wondering in 1930 whether the Van Sweringen Corporation would go bankrupt, they made plans to sell the corporation's securities.

Wheeler made his accusations during a hearing of the Senate Railroad Committee of which he is chairman. The Guaranty Co., New York securities firm, was interested in selling a Van Sweringen corporation note issue.

Assertin "these notes are in the portfolios of buster banks," Wheeler said investors lost more than half of the $30,000,000 they put into the Van Sweringen Corporation. The firm went bankrupt in 1936, he said, and had been insolvent "much earlier."

He put in evidence a memorandum from Alfred Shriver, former Guaranty Co. vice president, to Karl W. Eisheit, an associate, discussing the possibility of the corporation going bankrupt.

Suggested Campaign.

This was followed by another inter-office memorandum dated three days later, in which F. L. Moore, another vice president, suggested "a campaign on these bonds either prior or immediately following convention of the American Banking Association."

Joseph R. Swan, former Guaranty company president, insisted that the discussion of possible bankruptcy was "purely theoretical" and that "Shriver would never consider selling securities if he really thought they were endangered by bankruptcy."

William C. Potter, board chairman of the Guaranty Trust Co., the trustee under the note issued, told investigators he was "surprised and shocked" to learn the Van Sweringen Corporation—ostensibly formed to develop Cleveland real estate—had spent most of its funds in stock market speculation.

Prices Above Market.

Committee records showed the funds had been turned over to a subsidiary, Cleveland Terminal Building Co., which used them to buy stock of other Van Sweringen firms at prices high above the market level.

Wheeler criticized what he called "a misleading statement" distributed to newsmen by James West, who said he was "public relations advisor" for Guaranty Trust Co. and J. P. Morgan and Co.

Jealous Suitor Kills One, Wounds 2 Others

Detroit, Jan. 14 (AP).—Two persons were killed and two wounded today in a Dearborn rooming house shooting affray that police said was prompted by jealousy. Officers said Frank Shaner, 65, of Youngstown, Ohio, fatally shot Edward Vankirk, 25, and seriously wounded Mr. and Mrs. John Petrisor before killing himself.

Mrs. Petrisor told police Shaner had lived at a rooming house she formerly operated at Youngstown and that he had wanted to marry her. Vankirk was her son by a previous marriage.

Eurasian Woman Faces Deportation as Smuggler

Los Angeles, Jan. 14 (AP).—Maria Wendt, Eurasian drug-smuggler, was sentenced today to ten years in prison.

Federal Judge Albert Lee Stephens, after sentencing her, granted a stay of execution until February 1 to permit immigration officials to carry out an order that she be deported to Shanghai.

K. of C. Official Dies.

Deal, N. J., Jan. 14 (AP).—John J. Cone, 79, supereme knight of the Knights of Columbus in the United States from 1896 to 1900, died last night. In 1925, he was made a Knight of St. Gregory the Great by Pope Pius XI.

Lemke, Colleague Stripped of Rank By House G.O.P.

By the Associated Press.

The House stripped committee seniority yesterday from Representative Lemke (Republican), of North Dakota, the Union Party's Presidential candidate last November, and from his colleague, Representative Burdick (Republican), of North Dakota.

Burdick promptly resigned from his three committees—Indian, invalid pensions and territories. Lemke said he is undecided whether to quit the census and public lands committees, adding:

The changes were approved by House Republicans in a morning conference, along with committee assignments for all their 89 members. The conference decision was ratified later by the House.

Social Security Law Is Upheld By U. S. Court

By the Associated Press.

Birmingham, Ala., Jan. 14.—Federal District Judge David J. Davis held the Federal social security act constitutional today and dismissed two suits asking injunctions to prevent collection of taxes levied under it.

More than 200 Alabama firms were petitioners. They pleaded "double payment" because the deputy collector of internal revenue here refused to credit them with payments made under the Alabama social security act, companion of the Federal measure, and attacked validity of the Federal law.

The State act was held invalid by a three-judge Federal Court at Montgomery recently. When the State appealed, the funds collected under the law were ordered held under court guardianship pending final adjudication. Petitioners said they were not allowed deductions for the payment held in escrow by the court.

"For the last five years," Judge Davis said, "many people have been unemployed * * * many people were hungry. * * * To relieve this situation, the Federal Government spent billions of dollars.

"Can it with reason be said that the Congress cannot levy an excise tax on the privilege of employing others to aid in prevention of a recurrence of such a calamity and the alleviation of its hardships should it come again? * * *

"The complainants contend that to deny a restraining order * * * would be to subject them to an unresonable penalty in that they would have to pay the tax under the Federal act and if the State act is held constitutional, they then will have to pay the State tax and will be deprived of the 90 per cent credit on the Federal tax. * * *

"I am of the opinion that, the Federal tax being legal, this court has no authority to enjoin the collectors of internal revenue from assessing and collecting same."
